

Table of Contents

A. Introductory Remarks	11
I. Towards a Research Question	12
II. Atlantic Bluefin Tuna	16
III. Methodology	17
IV. Structure	20
B. On the Freedoms of the High Seas	22
I. Freedom of Fishing	24
II. Basis of International Fisheries Law	27
III. Cooperation in International Fisheries Management	31
IV. Utilisation and Conservation in International Fisheries Law	35
V. Responsibility in International Fisheries and for the Ecosystem	39
VI. Fisheries Management concerning Atlantic Bluefin Tuna	43
VII. Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing	49
C. On the Common Heritage of Humankind	52
I. Towards a Marine Common Heritage	55
II. Common Heritage as Limitation of the High Seas Freedom	58
III. Comparison with Other Regimes	61
IV. Difficulties of Denomination	64
V. Positive Law and Natural Law	69
VI. Sources of International Law	78
1. International Conventions	83
2. International Custom	85
3. General Principles of Law	89
4. Fundamental Principles of International Law	99
5. Subsidiary Sources	103
6. Soft Law	105
VII. Common Heritage: Old Wine in a New Bottle?	113
VIII. Common Heritage in International Fisheries Law	119
D. On Justice Between Humans and Their Natural Environment	124
I. Intragenerational Justice	124
II. Peaceful Use as a Prerequisite for Justice	129
III. Intergenerational Justice	131

IV. Biocentric Justice	135
V. The Price of Conservation	144
VI. Justice in International Fisheries Law	147
E. On Public Trusteeship	155
I. Management and Public Trusteeship	159
II. Non-Appropriation as a Prerequisite for Public Trusteeship	165
III. Public Trusteeship in Contemporary Fisheries Management	173
IV. Public Trusteeship in Fisheries de lege ferenda	177
V. Economic Aspects of Public Trusteeship in Fisheries	184
F. By Way of Conclusion: Picking up the Threads	189
Legal Instruments	194
Cases	199
Bibliography	201
Person and Subject Index	236