

Contents

List of Contributors	page vii
Preface	ix
Chronology	xi
Introduction: "Impatient of Oppression" in Early African American Writing in Transition Rhondda Robinson Thomas	i
PART I LIMITS AND LIBERTIES OF EARLY BLACK PRINT CULTURE
1 Early Black Evangelical Writing and the Limits of Print Joseph Rezek	17
2 The Circulation of Early Black Atlantic Literature Eric D. Lamore	42
3 What Makes a Text "Black"? From Authorship to Metadata Jordan Alexander Stein	73
PART II BLACK WRITING AND REVOLUTION
4 Anglo-Africans Writing Themselves into History during the Age of Revolution Daniel C. Littlefield	99
5 Joining the Revolution: African American Writing in the Era of Independence Thomas J. Davis	123
6 Black Literary Engagement with the Haitian Revolution Ronald Angelo Johnson	148

PART III EARLY AFRICAN AMERICAN LIFE IN LITERATURE
7	Reading and Building a Nation; or, Everyday Living (while Black) in Early America Tara A. Bynum	181
8	Respectability Politics and Early African American Literature Cassander L. Smith	204
9	Early Black Futures Brigitte Fielder	228
PART IV EVOLUTIONS OF EARLY BLACK LITERATURE
10	Black Authors and British National Identity, 1763–1791 Ryan Hanley	257
11	The Competing Demands of Early African American Literature Katy L. Chiles	281
12	Black Letters Close the Eighteenth Century John Saillant	306
	Index	331