

Contents

Introduction: Rediscovering Early Phenomenology in Central and Eastern Europe . . . . .	1
Witold Płotka and Patrick Eldridge
Early Phenomenology in Prague . . . . .	17
Hynek Janoušek and Robin D. Rollinger
Husserl’s Early Phenomenology and the Ontology of Truth in the Lvov-Warsaw School . . . . .	35
Dariusz Łukasiewicz
Gustav Špet’s “Hermeneutical Phenomenology” Project: His Reinterpretation of Husserl’s Phenomenology . . . . .	59
Natalia Artemenko
On the Phenomenological Implications of Semyon Frank’s Psychological Philosophy of the Living Soul . . . . .	75
Alexander Kozin
Vasily Sesemann’s Theory of Knowledge, and Its Phenomenological Relevance . . . . .	93
Dalius Jonkus
Roman Ingarden’s Early Theory of the Object . . . . .	111
Marek Piwowarczyk
Nae Ionescu and the Origins of Phenomenology in Romania . . . . .	127
Viorel Cernica
Theodor Celms and the “Realism–Idealism” Controversy . . . . .	145
Uldis Vēgners
Leopold Blaustein’s Descriptive Psychology and Aesthetics in Light of His Criticism of Husserl . . . . .	163
Witold Płotka

Life and the Natural World in the Early Work of Jan Patočka (1930–1945) .....	187
Karel Novotný
The Beginnings of Phenomenology in Yugoslavia: Zagorka Mičić on Husserl’s Method .....	203
Dragan Prole
Index .....	217