

Contents

List of figures	xi
Preface to the series	xii
Preface to the volume	xiv
Acknowledgements	xviii
1 Introduction	1
PART I
Theory of religion as theory of knowledge	33
2 Tensions in the study of gender, religion and theology	35
3 Gender and religion as categories of knowledge: deconstruction, discourse analysis, intersectionality, deessentialisation, disidentification and the critique of ancient texts	52
4 The political-performative power of language, appropriation, cultures of translation and travelling theory: the discourse of the “Bible in just language” against gender and social exclusions and anti-Judaism	83
PART II
Religion, secularity and gender after the post-secular turn	103
5 Fundamentalisms and secularisms: sovereign power, biopolitical citizenship and the possibilities of subaltern agency	105
6 The new role of religion in the public sphere: redefining secularity and secularisms in Europe and beyond	126

PART III
Religion, gender, neo-nationalisms and biopolitics	145
7 Religious legitimation of national gender construction: masculine hegemony in the South African Truth and Reconciliation Commission – Christianity versus Ubuntu	147
8 Biopolitical interferences of nation states and dominant religious institutions: the epistemological challenge of queer parenthood and rainbow children	163
9 Human rights, gender and religion: controversies in political, social, cultural and sexuality discourses	178
PART IV
Religion, gender, activism and the multiplicity of agency	203
10 Religion, gender and the Peaceful Revolution of 1989: on the conflictual relationships between feminisms and theologies in East and West Germany	205
11 Imagining futures through the multitude: religion, gender and agency in the Occupy Wall Street movement	225
12 Decolonising public space: a critique of Dietrich Bonhoeffer's and Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak's concepts of resistance, religion and gender	245
13 Connecting activism with postcolonial, post-secular and queer epistemology: resistance and the radical social imaginary in Eastern European dissidence and new social movements	267
PART V
Religion, gender, visual culture and performativity	291
14 Creating archives of agency photography after the post-secular turn: on the performativity of tattoos, textiles and Islam in Mali	293
15 Résumé	314
Index	340