

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: “A Cemetery Inhabited by Highly Vocal Ghosts”	1
	References	14
2	Claiming Wisdom: Re-reading Othello in Gayl Jones’ Mosquito	17
	References	41
3	Uncrossed Lovers: Remembering Race in Romeo and Juliet and Mississippi Masala	47
	References	72
4	Bodies, Race, and Performance in Antony and Cleopatra and Derek Walcott’s A Branch of the Blue Nile : Memory’s Signatures	77
	References	103
5	Echoes of Harlem: Women’s Memories in Othello and Harlem Duet	109
	References	131
6	‘The Right Foundation’: Re-racing Romance from The Taming of the Shrew to Deliver Us from Eva	135
	References	162

7	Afterword: Adapting Shakespeare, Forgetting Race in King Charles III—Future History?	167
	References	173
	Index	175