

Contents

Debating Critical Theory: An Introduction	vii
Julia Christ, Kristina Lepold, Daniel Loick, and Titus Stahl
SECTION I: CRITIQUE	1
1 Realism, Yet Again	3
Raymond Geuss
2 Kantian Republicanism versus the Neo-Republican Machine: The Meaning and Practice of Political Autonomy	17
Rainer Forst
3 Taking a Stand: Second-Order Social Pathologies or First-Order Critique	35
Sally Haslanger
4 Immanent Normativity and the Fact of Domination: Notes on “Immanent Critique”	51
Martin Saar
5 Moral Economy: A Critical Reappraisal	67
Didier Fassin
6 Radical Civility: Social Struggles and the Domestication of Dissent	83
Robin Celikates

SECTION II: RECOGNITION	95
7 Rousseau on the Nature of Social Inequality Frederick Neuhauser	97
8 Repressive Empathy? A Plea for Contextualization Martin Hartmann	113
9 On Human Sociability Joel Whitebook	129
SECTION III: SOCIAL FREEDOM	149
10 Ethical Life and Anomie: From Social Philosophy to Sociology of the State Bruno Karsenti	151
11 Socialism and the Nation-State David Miller	173
12 Hegel's Concept of the Person and International Human Rights Seyla Benhabib	187
13 Fashioning Our Selves? On Understanding and Criticizing the Digitized Society Beate Roessler	205
14 The Crisis of Liberalism: The Dialectic of Politics and Police Christoph Menke	225
SECTION IV: PROGRESS	245
15 John Dewey Goes to Frankfurt: Pragmatism, Critical Theory, and the Invisibility of Moral/Social Problems Philip Kitcher	247
16 Political Progress: Piecemeal, Pragmatic, and Processual Christopher F. Zurn	269
17 Psychoanalysis and the Critique of Progress Amy Allen	287
About the Contributors and Editors	305