

Contents

1 Introduction: Bringing Kant, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, and Wittgenstein Together	1
References	9
2 Immanuel Kant: The Moral Duty of Self-Preservation	11
2.1 Contextualizing Kant's Prohibition of Suicide	11
2.2 Arguments from the Lectures on Ethics	23
2.3 Arguments from the Published Writings	40
2.4 Concluding Remarks	64
References	66
3 Arthur Schopenhauer: The Metaphysical Futility of Suicide	71
3.1 Schopenhauer's Critique of Religious and Philosophical Arguments against Suicide	78
3.2 Schopenhauer's Metaphysical Worldview	90
3.3 The Futility of Suicide	100
3.4 Concluding Remarks	117
References	118

4	Friedrich Nietzsche: A Free Death at the Right Time	123
4.1	Voluntary versus Involuntary Death	131
4.2	Free Death and Quick Death	143
4.3	Meaninglessness and Suicide	155
4.4	Concluding Remarks	173
	References	174
5	Ludwig Wittgenstein: Suicide as the Elementary Sin	179
5.1	The Sources	189
5.2	Wittgenstein's View of Ethics	199
5.3	Wittgenstein's Remarks on Suicide	208
5.4	Concluding Remarks	221
	References	223
6	Conclusion: What Kant, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, and Wittgenstein Can Teach Us About Suicide	227
	References	240
	Index	243