

Contents

List of Figures.....	ix
1. Introduction	1
1.1. Communication, Power, and the Fragmentation of the Ancient World.....	1
1.2. Scope and Methodologies.....	4
1.3. The Last Horizons of Roman Gaul.....	8
2. Aeduan Communications at the End of Antiquity	9
2.1. Brothers and Kinsmen of the Roman People.....	9
2.2. Before 450: Autun Looks Northwest.....	11
2.3. ca. 450-480: Broad Horizons, Gathering Storms	13
3. Aeduan Communications at the Dawn of the Middle Ages	17
3.1. Autun's Small World.....	17
3.2. Looking South: Chalon under the Burgundians	20
3.3. Under Frankish Rule.....	22
3.4. Aeduan Horizons: Initial Conclusions.....	25
4. Lingon Communications at the End of Antiquity	27
4.1. A City with Closed Gates.....	27
4.2. ca. 450-506: Years of Silence, Years of Violence	28
4.3. Aprunculus of Langres: Contextualizing an Exile.....	34
5. Lingon Communications at the Dawn of the Middle Ages	39
5.1. 506-534: Gregorius Attalus, Great Man in a Small World	39
5.2. After 534: A Brave New World	46
5.3. Lingon Horizons: Initial Conclusions.....	49
6. Buried Treasures and Hidden Networks	51
6.1. Coins and Burgundian History	51
6.2. The Evidence from Hoards.....	57
7. Single Finds and Small Worlds.....	63
7.1. Peace and Abundance?	63
7.2. Coin Distributions in Burgundian Territory	63
7.3. Coins beyond the Burgundian Kingdom: Distance-Traveled Analysis	67
7.3.1. Provence and the South	69
7.3.2. The Frankish North.....	72
7.3.3. Aquitania and Western Gaul	75
7.4. The Brèves tremissis and Burgundian Isolation.....	76
8. Synthesis & Conclusions: The Last Horizons of Roman Gaul.....	79
8.1. Summary of Findings	79
8.2. Network and Gravity Theories	80
8.3. The Limits of the Second Burgundian Kingdom.....	81
Bibliography	85
Abbreviations Used	85
Ancient and Medieval Sources	85
Modern Works	87
Image Credits	107