

CONTENTS

Preface	ix
Translations and Abbreviations	xiv
Introduction: On Perception and Narration	I
Starting points	I
Aesthesis and diegesis	9
Participation and concretization	13
Perceiving diegetic worlds	16
Aesthesiologies	20
Texts and scenes	24
Scenographies	28
The task ahead	31
I The 'Story' of Perception (Hegel)	43
1 The Dialectic Force of the Senses	45
Hegel in the Swiss Alps	45
Sense experience in the Phenomenology	47
2 Sense-Certainty (Process)	54
Noticing, meaning, knowing	54
Negation, deixis, language	57
Here and Now as abstractions, and as dialectic	63
The (hi)story of sense-certainty	70
3 Object Perception (Relation)	75
Perception as determinate negation	75
The recursivity of perception	77
The intervention of reflection	84
Logos as substance of reflection	90
(Hi)stories and concepts	96
II The Language of the Senses (Novalis, Rilke, Proust)	115
1 Reciprocity of Perception and Poetry in Novalis	117
The poetry of perception, or, 'the art to become almighty'	117
Difficulties with the senses	123
'Wechselbestimmung'	130
The perception of poetry, or, 'the blue flower'	139

2	Looking with Rilke	160
	Seeing things	160
	Exchanging imprints	163
	Anxiety and objectification	169
	Nachträglichkeit	176
	Anonymity and inexhaustibility	181
3	Listening to Proust's Recherche	195
	Music and memory, or, the leitmotif	195
	'Longtemps'	200
	The music of Vinteuil	209
	Conclusion	225
	Bibliography	231
	Index	249