

CONTENTS

---

List of Contributors	xi
Acknowledgments	xix
About the Companion Website	xxi
Note to the Reader	xxiii

General introduction: Idiosyncrasies of the operatic canon CORMAC NEWARK AND WILLIAM WEBER	1
---	---

PART I HISTORY, GEOGRAPHY

Introduction to chapters 1 and 2	25
Foundations: France and Italy in the eighteenth century
1. The practical and symbolic functions of pre-Rameau opera at the Paris Opéra before Gluck	27
MICHEL NOIRAY
2. Italian opera and the concept of “canon” in the late eighteenth century	51
FRANCO PIPERNO
Further reading for chapters 1 and 2	71
Introduction to chapters 3 and 4	73
From royal authority to public taste in Berlin, 1740–1815
3. The repertory of the Italian Court Opera in Berlin, 1740–1786	75
JOHN MANGUM
4. Catching up and getting ahead: The opera house as temple of art in Berlin c. 1800	93
KATHERINE HAMBRIDGE
Further reading for chapters 3 and 4	111

Introduction to chapters 5 and 6	113
Operatic practices at the London Opera: Pasticcio to repertory to canon?
5. From recycled performances to repertory: The King's Theatre in London, 1705–1820	115
MICHAEL BURDEN
6. Repertory opera and canonic sensibility: The London Opera, 1820–1860	131
JENNIFER HALL-WITT
Further reading for chapters 5 and 6	156
Introduction to chapters 7 and 8	157
From capital-city opera house to provincial theaters in France
7. The evolution of French opera repertories in provincial theaters: Three epochs, 1770–1900	159
PATRICK TAÏEB AND SABINE TEULON LARDIC
8. The mingling of opera genres: Canonic opera at the Théâtre des Arts in Rouen, 1882–1897	185
YANNICK SIMON
Further reading for chapters 7 and 8	204
Introduction to chapters 9 and 10	205
The Italian opera world and its canons
9. Theaters, markets, and canonic implications in the Italian opera system, 1820–1880	207
CARLOTTA SORBA
10. Operatic canons and repertories in Italy c. 1900	227
JUTTA TOELLE
Further reading for chapters 9 and 10	241

Introduction to chapters 11 and 12	243
Opera in the western hemisphere, 1811–1910: New York, Buenos Aires, and Montevideo
11. International opera in nineteenth-century New York: Core repertoires and canonic values	245
KAREN AHLQUIST
12. Canons of real and imagined opera: Buenos Aires and Montevideo, 1810–1860	271
BENJAMIN WALTON
Further reading for chapters 11 and 12	292
Introduction to chapters 13 and 14	293
Tensions between the national and the cosmopolitan: Canons in England and Russia
13. The survival of English opera in nineteenth-century concert life	295
WILLIAM WEBER
14. National and international canons of opera in tsarist Russia	317
RUTGER HELMERS
Further reading for chapters 13 and 14	336
 PART II OTHER VIEWS, OTHER CANONS
Introduction to chapters 15 and 16	339
Singers and the operatic canon
15. Setting the standard: Singers, theater practices, and the operatic canon in nineteenth-century France	341
KIMBERLY WHITE
16. Redefining the standard: Pauline Viardot and Gluck's Orphée	361
HILARY PORISS
Further reading for chapters 15 and 16	382

Introduction to chapters 17 and 18	383
Uses of the operatic canon
17. Canons of the Risorgimento then and now	385
CORMAC NEWARK
18. “Blow the opera houses into the air”: Wagner, Boulez, and Modernist canons	403
MARK BERRY
Further reading for chapters 17 and 18	419
Introduction to chapters 19 and 20	421
Rewriting the operatic canon
19. Phantoms at the Opéra: Meyerbeer and de-canonization	423
FLORA WILLSON
20. The uses and disadvantages of opera history: Unhistorical thinking in fin-de-siècle Paris	441
WILLIAM GIBBONS
Further reading for chapters 19 and 20	455
Introduction to chapters 21 and 22	457
Contiguous genres: Operetta and American musicals
21. Viennese operetta canon formation and the journey to prestige	459
MICAELA BARANELLO
22. Canons of the American musical	475
RAYMOND KNAPP
Further reading for chapters 21 and 22	491
Introduction to chapters 23 and 24	493
Twentieth-century reproduction technology and the operatic canon
23. Sound recording and the operatic canon: Three “drops of the needle”	495
KAREN HENSON
24. Opera on film and the canon	509
HUGO SHIRLEY
Further reading for chapters 23 and 24	522

---

Introduction to chapters 25 and 26	523
Views of the operatic canon from the industry
25. Critical reflections on the operatic canon	525
JOHN ROCKWELL
26. Inside and outside the operatic canon, on stage and in the boardroom	535
KASPER HOLTEN
Further listening and viewing for chapters 25 and 26	547
Bibliography	549
Index	579