

American Literature and American Identity

A Cognitive Cultural Study from the Civil War to the Twenty-First Century

Patrick Colm Hogan

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
A Note on Terminology	xii
Introduction Celebratory Nationalism, Critical Nationalism, and Disillusion: America After the Civil War	1
1 National Identity and National Emplotment	26
PART I
Race (I): Native America	37
2 Love and Death: Adapting The Last of the Mohicans	39
3 Heroism, Sacrifice, and Ancestral Memory: N. Scott Momaday's The Way to Rainy Mountain	55
4 Blood and Soil: Leslie Marmon Silko's Ceremony	64
PART II
Race (II): African America	81
5 Heroic Narrative and Colonialism: Eugene O'Neill's The Emperor Jones	83
6 Heroic Black Masculinity: Leroi Jones's Dutchman and The Slave	103
7 Against Despair: Spike Lee's Malcolm X	121

PART III
Sexual Orientation	141
8 Sexual Preference and the Purposes of a Democratic Nation: Lillian Hellman's The Children's Hour	143
9 The National Community and Its Alternatives: Djuna Barnes's Nightwood	158
10 Institutions and Communities: Tony Kushner's Angels in America	183
PART IV
Sex and Gender	199
11 Sex Hierarchies and Utopia: Charlotte Perkins Gilman's Herland	201
12 Sex Hierarchies and Dystopia: Margaret Atwood's The Handmaid's Tale	219
13 Sex Hierarchies and the Law Today: Heidi Schreck's What the Constitution Means to Me	235
Afterword: A Note on Pessimism of the Intellect and Optimism of the Will	249
Works Cited	252
Index	270