

Contents

Acknowledgements	v
Notes on Contributors	vi
Introduction: 'A reflection of the contrasts': Scottish Literature and World War I David A. Rennie	1
Part I: Multi-text Case Studies
1. Scottish Literature, Nationalism and the First World War Alan Riach	21
2. 'It Takes All Sorts to Make a Type': Scottish Great War Prose David A. Rennie	44
3. Unquiet on the Home Front: Scottish Popular Fiction and the Truth of War David Goldie	62
4. 'One Who Has Sacrificed': The Use of 'High Diction' in Women's Correspondence to Scottish Newspapers during the First World War Sarah Pedersen	81
5. Gaelic Verse Ronald Black	100
6. Gaelic Prose Ronald Black	122
7. Scottish Philosophy and the First World War Cairns Craig	143

Part II: Individual Authors

8. What Next?: Nan Shepherd and the First World War Alison Lumsden	165
9. Pagan Modernism: First World War and Spiritual Revival in Lewis Grassie Gibbon's Sunset Song and Neil M. Gunn's Highland River Scott Lyall	180
10. A Bounded Heaven: George A. C. Mackinlay and Great War Pastoral Randall Stevenson	200
11. Pastoral as Propaganda in John Buchan's Wartime Writing Fiona Houston	218
12. Charles Murray and A Soug o' War Robert Crawford	238
13. 'But Change, Nothing Abides': Sunset Song and the Nature of Change John Lucas	253
14. Ewart Alan Mackintosh in Memoriam: Leadership, Patriotism and Posthumous Commemoration Neil McLennan	268
Further Reading	286
Index	302