

CONTENTS

Introduction by John J McGavin and Greg Walker	1
PART I
Courts	5
1 Plays and playcoats: a courtly interlude tradition in Scotland?, Comparative Drama , 46:4 (2012), pp. 475–96.	7
2 ‘To thexaltacyon of noblesse’: a herald’s account of the marriage of Margaret Tudor and James IV, Medieval English Theatre , 29 (2009 for 2007), pp. 104–20.	25
3 ‘Gely wyth tharmys of Scotland England’: word, image and performance at the marriage of James IV and Margaret Tudor, in ‘ Fresche Fontanis ’: Studies in the Culture of Medieval and Early Modern Scotland , ed. by Janet Hadley Williams and J. Derrick McClure (Newcastle: Cambridge Scholars Press, 2013), pp. 165–77. Published with the permission of Cambridge Scholars Publishing.	40
4 (with Graham Runnalls), The Entertainments at the marriage of Mary Queen of Scots and the French Dauphin François, 1558: Paris and Edinburgh, Medieval English Theatre , 22 (2000), pp. 145–61 [with thanks to Mrs Anne Runnalls].	52
5 Performing diplomacies: the 1560s court entertainments of Mary Queen of Scots, Scottish Historical Review , LXXXII: 2 (October 2003), pp. 194–225. Reproduced with permission of the Licensor through PLSclear.	65

CONTENTS

6	Love and chastity: political performance in Scottish, French, and English courts of the 1560s, in Joyous Sweit Imaginatioun: Essays in Honour of Professor R.D.S. Jack , ed. by Sarah Carpenter and Sarah Dunnigan, SCROLL (Amsterdam and New York: Rodopi, 2007), pp. 111–28.	97
7	Dramatising ideology: Monarch, State, and People, Theta , 9 (2011), pp. 95–112 http://umr6576.cesr.univ-tours.fr/publications/Theta9/	110
PART II
	Audiences	123
8	New evidence: Vives and audience-response to biblical drama, Medieval English Theatre , 31 (2011 for 2009), pp. 3–12.	125
9	Verity’s Bible: books, texts, and reading in Ane Satyre of the Thrie Estaitis , Medieval English Theatre , 33 (2011), pp. 58–74.	133
10	Towards a reformed theatre: David Lyndsay and Ane Satyre of the Thrie Estaitis , The Yearbook of English Studies , 43 (2013), pp. 203–22. Reproduced by permission of the Modern Humanities Research Association.	146
11	The sixteenth-century court audience: performers and spectators, Medieval English Theatre , 19 (1997), pp. 3–14.	165
12	‘My Lady Tongue’: Thomas Tomkis’s Lingua , Medieval English Theatre , 24 (2002), pp. 3–14.	175
13	The politics of unreason: Ane Satyre of the Thrie Estaitis and the practices of folly, Theta , 10 (2013), pp. 35–52 http://umr6576.cesr.univ-tours.fr/publications/Theta10/	185
14	Laughing at natural fools, Theta , 11 (2014) pp. 3–22 http://umr6576.cesr.univ-tours.fr/publications/Theta11/	197
15	The places of foolery: Robert Armin and fooling in Edinburgh, Medieval English Theatre , 37 (2015), pp. 11–26.	211
	Sarah Carpenter: bibliography	224
	Index	227