

Table of Contents

1	Introduction	11
1.1	Topic and Research Question	11
1.2	Sample	16
1.3	Theoretical Framework and Methodology	24
1.4	State of Research	27
1.5	Project Structure	35
2	Collectivizing the Prison Experience	37
2.1	Collective Identity	38
2.1.1	Collective Identity – Theoretical Introduction.....	38
2.1.2	Collective Identity in Autobiographies.....	43
2.2	Positioning towards the Imagined Collective of Prisoners	45
2.2.1	General Patterns of Inscription into and Distancing from the Collective of Prisoners	46
2.2.2	Cohesion or Alienation – Responses to the Prison Context	58
2.3	Multicollectivity – Moving Beyond the Collective of Prisoners	76
2.4	Not an Exception but the Rule – Function of Collectivization.....	88
2.5	Conclusion.....	94
3	Doubled Identity as Victim and Perpetrator	97
3.1	Negotiating the Label of ‘Perpetrator’	101
3.1.1	Justifying Past Criminal Behavior	103
3.1.2	Claiming Innocence.....	131
3.2	Negotiating Victimhood	141
3.2.1	The Prisoner as Victim of Wrongdoing.....	143
3.2.2	Reclaiming Personhood.....	161
3.3	Conclusion.....	168

4	Rehabilitation and Identity Transformation.....	173
4.1	The Development of the Rehabilitative Ideal	174
4.2	Negotiating Rehabilitation through the Conversion Narrative.....	180
4.2.1	Conversion Narrative – Defining the Phenomenon	182
4.2.2	Religious Conversion Narratives	186
4.2.3	Secular Conversion Narratives	206
4.2.4	Narratives without Conversion – Recidivism, Suspended Identity and Innocence	226
4.3	Conclusion.....	253
5	Perpetuating the Carceral System? – Concluding Remarks on Autobiographical Prison Texts	255
6	Appendix	265
6.1	List of Core Autobiographical Prison Texts of the 1970s and 1980s.....	265
6.2	List of Related Prison Life Writings of the 1970s and 1980s	267
7	Works Cited.....	269