

Contents

List of Figures	viii
Acknowledgments	x
1. Editor's Introduction	1
Part I
Approaches to the History and Philosophy of Science	7
2 Introduction to "Approaches to the History and Philosophy of Science"	9
3 Reason in Science George (Jorge) Santayana	43
4 The Function of General Laws in History Carl Hempel	48
5 The Three Tasks of Epistemology Hans Reichenbach	62
6 What Are Scientific Revolutions? Thomas Kuhn	71

7	Falsification and the Methodology of Scientific Research Programmes Imre Lakatos	89
8	The Relations between the History and the Philosophy of Science Thomas Kuhn	95
9	The History of Science Thomas Kuhn	106
10	Scientific Research under a Historical Microscope Martin Rudwick	122
11	The Polity of Science Steven Shapin and Simon Schaffer	138
Part II
Debates in History and Philosophy of Science		151
A. Hypotheses in Scientific Discovery		153
12	Introduction to “Hypotheses in Scientific Discovery”	155
13	Of Inductions Improperly So Called John Stuart Mill	163
14	Mr. Mill’s Logic William Whewell	182
15	Physical Theory and Experiment Pierre Duhem	200
16	Is There a Logic of Scientific Discovery? Norwood Russell Hanson	220
B. Force in Natural Philosophy		235
17	Introduction to “Force in Natural Philosophy”	237
18	Principles of Philosophy (selections) Réne Descartes	254

19	Critical Thoughts on the General Part of the Principles of Descartes Gottfried Leibniz	282
20	On the Gravity and Equilibrium of Fluids Isaac Newton	307
21	On the Divisibility and Subtlety of Matter Émilie du Châtelet	332
22	Of the Idea of Necessary Connexion David Hume	343
23	How Is Pure Natural Science Possible? Immanuel Kant	356
	C. Natural History: Catastrophism and Uniformitarianism	375
24	Introduction to “Catastrophism and Uniformitarianism”	377
25	Initial Discourse George-Louis de Buffon	386
26	Preliminary Observations to the Essay on the Theory of the Earth Georges Cuvier	402
27	Prejudices Relating to the Theory of the Earth John Playfair	417
28	On the Geological Succession of Organic Beings Charles Darwin	426
29	Of the Doctrine of Catastrophes and the Doctrine of Uniformity William Whewell	452
	Index	462