

Contents

1. A Postmodern Déjà Vu	1
2. The Postmodern Turn Through the Ekphrastic Gaze.....	17
3. In the Interstices between Art, Words, and Life	33
3.1 “Could a Life be a Work of Art”?	33
3.2 The Compositional Fabrication of Ekphrastic Reality.....	43
3.3 The Iconography and the Iconology of Ekphrastic Reality.....	53
3.3.1 The Ekphrastic Gaze and the Third Dimension of a Work of Art: From the Removal of Three Centuries of Dirt to the Revelation of a Gainsboroughesque Dream	58
3.3.2 The Ekphrastic Gaze and the ‘Docile Body’: From the Antichrist’s Michelangelesque Curls to Erato’s Rokeby Venus Pose.....	68
3.4 Conclusion.....	81
4. In the Interstices between the Gazes of Author, Character, and Reader	83
4.1 Who Was the Ekphrastic Beholder After All?.....	83
4.2 The Dialectic of the Ekphrastic Beholder as the (Pseudo-)Connoisseur	89
4.2.1 Through the (Pseudo-)‘Intellectual Lens’ of the Ekphrastic Beholder’s Gaze: The ‘Bloody Ruskin’ of British Postmodern Fiction.....	93
4.2.2 On the (Pseudo-)‘Moral Retina’ of the Ekphrastic Beholder’s Gaze: The ‘Con-Turned-Artist’ of British Postmodern Fiction.....	104

4.3	The Interplay between the Ekphrastic Gazes of Author, Character, and Reader	113
4.3.1	Following in the Footsteps of Author and Character: The ‘Scholarly’ and ‘Alert’ Mock Reader of British Postmodern Fiction	116
4.3.2	The Real Reader’s Ekphrastic Gaze as an Instrument of (De-)‘Constructive Visualising Work’	124
4.4	Conclusion.....	130
5.	In the Interstices between the Métarécits and the Petits Récits of the Ekphrastic Gaze	133
6.	Conclusion.....	155
	Bibliography.....	158