

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	v
Table of Contents	vii
Introduction	1
A. Background Information	1
1. Objectives and Methodology	1
2. Structure and Contents	4
B. The Professional Careers of Leonard Bloomfield and Charles C. Fries	9
①. Leonard Bloomfield	9
2. Charles Carpenter Fries	10
a. Academic Activities at the University of Michigan	15
1) School of Education	15
2) Students	16
b. The American Council of Learned Societies	17
c. The Linguistic Society of America	17
d. The Modern Language Association	18
e. The National Council of Teachers of English	19
Notes	20
I. Bloomfield's and Fries' Orientations Towards Linguistics	21
A. Bloomfield's and Fries' Conceptions of a Linguistic Science	21
1. A Descriptive vs. a Normative Approach to Linguistics	21
2. Fries' Four Major Lifetime Objectives	28
3. Fries' Democratic/Humanistic Views on Education	32
Note	35
B. Bloomfield's and Fries' Views on Behaviorism	37
> Introduction	37
1. Bloomfield's and Fries' Alleged Associations	37
with Behaviorism

2. Bloomfield's and Fries' Stated Positions on Behaviorism	40
3. Bloomfield's and Fries' Views Compared to the Tenets of Watsonian Behaviorism	43
a. Major Tenets of Watsonian Behaviorism	44
① Objectivity of Research and Rejection of Mentalism ..	44
2) Quantifiability of Behavior	47
3) Determinism of Behavior	49
b. Minor Tenets of Watsonian Behaviorism	51
1) First-Language Acquisition	51
2) The Shaping of Behavior Through Environment	52
3) The Elimination of Personal Responsibility	53
4. Bloomfield's and Fries' Views Compared to Behavioristic Teaching Principles on Second-Language Acquisition	54
⑤ Bloomfield's Relationship to Albert P. Weiss	58
✕ Conclusion	59
Notes	60

C. Bloomfield's and Fries' Criticisms of Traditional Grammar	63
1. An Outline of Traditional Grammar's Historical Development down to the Renaissance	63
2. Depiction of Bloomfield's and Fries' Criticisms of Traditional Grammar	68
a. Historical Background of Eighteenth-Century Grammars ..	70
b. Twentieth-Century Challenges to Traditional Grammar ..	72
c. Traditional Notions about Language Change	75
d. The Historical Development of English away from an Inflectional Language	77
e. Traditional Analyses of English Grammar	78
f. The Effect of Traditional Grammar on American Schools	83
✕ Conclusion	85
Notes	86

II. Fries' Reception of Bloomfield and His Contributions

Beyond Bloomfield	89
Notes	91
A. Language Theory	93
Introduction	93
1. Bloomfield's Language Theory	94
a. Bloomfield's Stimulus-Response Model of Speech Behavior	94
b. The Function and Predictability of Language	96
1) The Function of Language in a Speech-Community ...	96
2) The Predictability of Language	98
c. The Scientific Standard of Meaning Description to which Bloomfield Aspired	100
d. Bloomfield's Focus on Linguistic Methodology	104
2. Fries' Reception of Bloomfield's Language Theory	106
a. Fries' Adaptation of Bloomfield's Stimulus-Response Model	106
b. The Function of Speech	110
1) Emphasizing the Social Function of Speech	110
2) Emphasizing the Predictability of the Hearer's Response	110
c. Fries' Moderate Position on Meaning Description	115
d. Fries' Focus on System and Contrastive Patterns	116
> Conclusion	118
Notes	119
B. Language Description	121
Introduction	121
1. Bloomfield's Formal Approach to Language Description as Presented in Language	123
a. An Overview of Bloomfield's Synchronic Language Description	123
b. Semantics - Describing Language Forms which Signal Meanings	126
1) Sentence-Types	130
2) Syntax	133
3) Substitution	138
4) Form-Classes and Lexicon	140

Notes	145
2. Fries' Synchronic Description of Language	146
a. Levels/Layers of Language Meaning	146
b. A General Description of Fries' Approach to Grammar .	151
c. American English Grammar	157
Notes	160
3. Fries' Formal Approach to English Grammar as Presented in The Structure of English	163
a. "What is a Sentence?" (Ch. II) and "Kinds of Sentences" (Ch. III)	166
b. "Parts of Speech" (Ch. V)	171
c. "Function Words" (Ch. VI)	174
d. "Parts of Speech: Formal Characteristics" (Ch. VII)	174
e. "Structural Patterns of Sentences" (Ch. VIII)	175
f. "Structural Meanings: 'Subjects' and 'Objects' " (Ch. IX)	179
g. "Modification" (Ch. X)	183
h. " 'Sequence' Sentences and 'Included' Sentences" (Ch. XI)	184
i. "Immediate Constituents: 'Layers' of Structures" (Ch. XII)	185
Conclusion	190
Notes	198
 C. Teaching American Children to Read English	199
Introduction	199
1. Linguistic Insights into Language and the Reading Process	200
2. Principles for Selecting and Classifying Words for the Reading Materials	209
a. Word Selection	209
b. Word Classification	210
3. Gradation and Presentation of the Reading Materials	218
a. The Pre-reading Stage	220
b. Presentation of the Reading Materials	221
c. Structuring the Reading Materials	224
Conclusion	226
Notes	228

Summary	231
Appendix 1 - Bloomfield's Reception of Albert P. Weiss	249
Appendix 2 - Fries' Reception of Leonard Bloomfield	251
Appendix 3 - The Stimulus-Response Models of Max Meyer and Erwin Esper	257
Appendix 4 - Comparison of Bloomfield's and Fries' Classification of English Grapheme-Phoneme Relationships	259
Bibliography	263
A. General Bibliography	263
B. Bibliography of Leonard Bloomfield	277
C. Bibliography of Charles C. Fries	281
Part 1: Publications	281
Part 2: Unpublished Manuscripts	286
Part 3: Personal Letters to Fries' Son, Peter H. Fries	286
Abbreviations	287