

Contents

List of contributors	vii
Acknowledgements	viii
From Prosodic Analysis to Systemic Phonology Paul Tench	1
Part I. Segments and syllables
1. Towards a systemic account of Gooniyandi segmental phonology William B. McGregor	19
2. English consonant clusters: a systemic approach David Young	44
3. Length in Telugu V. Prakasam	70
4. The pharyngealization system in Algerian Spoken Arabic Djafar Eddaikra and Paul Tench	77
5. Systems for open syllabics in North Welsh John Kelly	87
6. A systemic interpretation of Peking syllable finals M. A. K. Halliday	98
7. Non-segmental phonology and variable rules: investigating variation in Singapore Mandarin nasal finals Graham Lock	122
Part II. Tones and tonality
8. An instrumental analysis of English nuclear tones David L. E. Watt	135
9. Tone and the status of information Paul Tench	161
10. Tone groups and reported speech in Swahili Joan Maw	175
Part III. Discourse and new directions
11. Monostratal phonology and speech synthesis John Coleman and John Local	183
12. Language as tranquilizer: a phonostylistic study of some Yoruba lullabies Niyi Oladeji	194

13. Prosodic cohesion in a systemic perspective: Philip Larkin reading
'Toads Revisited' 206
Martin Davies
14. Rhythm and social context: accent and juncture in the speech of professional radio announcers 231
Theo van Leeuwen
- Index 263