

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface	VII
Abstract	VIII
Introduction	1
1. The Comparability of Hegel and Heidegger	4
2. The Question of Being	15
3. The Traits of Being	26
4. Divisions of the Inquiry
5. A Note on Theologians	30
6. Summary of Results	36
I. Being as Immediate	38
1. Hegel's Problem of Making a Beginning	38
2. Heidegger's Two Beginnings	47
3. Destruction and Sublation of Metaphysics	50
4. Abstract Being in Hegel's Logic	57
5. Abstract Being in Hegel's Phenomenology	61
6. Heidegger's Phenomenological Refutation of Hegel	65
7. Heidegger's Etymological Refutation of Hegel	70
8. Summary of Results	76
II. Being as Determinate	79
1. Determinate Being as an Ontological Problem	79
2. Determinate Being in Hegel's Logic	84
3. Determinate Being in Hegel's Phenomenology	89
4. The Categories of Finite Being According to Heidegger	93
5. Jemeinigkeit and the "Who" of Dasein	101
6. The Dialectic of Self and Other According to Hegel	106
7. Summary of Results	109

III. Being as Absolute	113
1. The Concept "Absolute"	114
2. Absolute Being in Hegel's Logic	117
3. Absolute Being in Hegel's Phenomenology	124
4. Heidegger's Interpretation of Hegel's Absolute	131
5. Heidegger's Quest for the Meaning of Being	135
6. Summary of Results	144
IV. Conclusions	151
1. Continuities and Discontinuities	151
2. The Interpretation of Hegel	154
3. The Interpretation of Heidegger	155
4. The Self as the Paradigm of Being	157
5. Theological Implications	159
Notes	163
Bibliography	184