

Table of Contents

Preface	9
List of abbreviations	11
Symbols	13
Chapter one: Towards a new hypothesis	15
1.1 Aim and scope	15
1.2 Heavy and light	15
1.3 The nature of Germanic accent	17
1.4 The problem of \acute{U} — (X)	20
1.5 Double accent	23
1.6 Lloyd and Carr on Notker	25
1.7 The working hypothesis so far	30
1.8 After Old High German	32
1.9 The search for law and order intensifies	33
1.10 Suffix accent in the indicative	33
1.11 Suffix accent in the optative	35
1.12 Stocktaking	37
1.13 The Sievers-Edgerton hypothesis	37
1.14 Class I weak verbs	38
1.15 Further development of the working hypothesis	40
1.16 Comments on rules	41
1.17 Marked suffix accent	43
1.18 Shortcomings and merits so far	46
Chapter two: Let's see if it works	47
2.1 Preliminaries	47
2.2 Present indicative. Strong verbs	47
2.3 The problem of suffixal -j-	48
2.4 Present indicative. Weak verbs	50
2.5 The optative in strong verbs	52
2.6 The optative in weak verbs	53
2.7 The imperative	56
2.8 Grammatical change in verb endings	58
2.9 Old High German -mēs	59
2.10 Indicative-optative forms in Old High German	60
2.11 Summary	62
2.12 Appendix I. Long optative polemics	63
2.13 Appendix II. On the need for thematics in class III weak ..	65
2.14 Appendix III. Dishington and class III weak	67
Chapter three: The weak preterite	69
3.1 Choosing a theory	69
3.2 Reduplication and the weak preterite	69
3.3 Rückumlaut	72

3.4	The fate of Gmc. dēn/dōn	73
3.5	Another case of syncope: habda	78
3.6	The role of the aorist	79
3.7	The origin of the short preterites: Go. waurhta etc.	79
3.8	Summary	83
Chapter four: The Germanic ablaut series		85
4.1	A pattern in the ablaut series	85
4.2	Class I	86
4.3	Class II	88
4.4	Class III	89
4.5	Class V	91
4.6	Excursus on the nature of Verner's Law	93
4.7	Application of this view	95
4.8	Class VI	96
4.9	Class VII	99
4.10	Summary and amplification	101
Chapter five: Reduplication to infixation to ablaut in class seven		103
5.1	Introduction	103
5.2	Position of accent in preterite	104
5.3	A plague of infixes	105
5.4	Superinfix -e-	108
5.5	E -infixation and grammatical change	113
5.6	Ordering and restatement of rules	114
5.7	Summary	117
Chapter six: Heavy suffix accent in nouns and adjectives		119
6.1	Inherited heavy suffix accent	119
6.2	Collectives with Germanic heavy suffix accent	120
6.3	Conclusion	121
Chapter seven: Suffix accent in abstracts		123
7.1	Introduction. Barber and Helm	123
7.2	Abstracts in -i-	125
7.3	Abstracts in -u-	131
7.4	Abstracts in -a	132
7.5	Abstracts in -an	135
7.6	Abstracts in -ō and jō	136
7.7	Abstracts in -ōn and jōn	139
7.8	Summary and conclusion	139
Chapter eight: The dissyllabic abstract suffix in late Germanic		143
8.1	Recapitulation	143
8.2	Abstracts in -īn	143
8.3	Abstracts in -īni -aini -ōni	144
8.4	Abstracts in -ingō/ungō	144
8.5	Abstracts in -iþō	145
8.6	Abstracts in -ōþu/ōðu and -assu	146

8.7	Go. -dūps	147
8.8	Abstracts and instruments in -isla/islō	148
8.9	Abstracts and instruments in IE -tro/tra	148
8.10	Summary	150
Chapter nine: The development of suffix accent for personal nouns		151
9.1	Personal nouns in -ō	151
9.2	Personal nouns in -ōn	151
9.3	Personal nouns in -ī/jō	152
9.4	Personal nouns in -jōn	153
9.5	Personal nouns in -ini/injō	154
9.6	Personal nouns in -isjō(n)/usjō(n)	154
9.7	Review of personal feminines	155
9.8	Personal nouns in -a	155
9.9	Personal nouns in -an and -ja(n)	157
9.10	Personal masculine -ārja	159
9.11	Summary, review and bridge	160
Chapter ten: On the trail of changing accent		163
10.1	A statistical approach	163
10.2	Written traces of changing accent strictly within the paradigm	167
10.3	Summary and conclusion	170
Chapter eleven: Accentuation within the nominal paradigm		173
11.1	Introduction	173
11.2	Consonant stems	173
11.3	The neuter a -stems	176
11.4	The n -stems	178
11.5	The ō -stems	184
11.6	The i -stems	188
11.7	The u -stems	192
11.8	The masculine a -stems	195
11.9	The masculine ja/ija -stems	197
11.10	The adjective	201
11.11	Comparative and superlative	208
11.12	Adverbs	209
11.13	Conclusion	210
11.14	Appendix. Final modifications to the hypothesis	211
Chapter twelve: Finally, Germanic finals		213
12.1	Introduction	213
	Development into Gothic and Old High German	215
12.2	Postradical Gmc. ō	215
12.3	Postradical Gmc. ē	216
12.4	Stress-lengthened OHG ē	217
12.5	Postradical Gmc. ī	218
12.6	Postradical Gmc. ū	219
12.7	Postradical Gmc. ā	219

12.8	Postradical Gmc. ai	219
12.9	Postradical Gmc. au	220
12.10	Postradical Gmc. eu/iu	220
	Development into Old Icelandic	220
12.11	Postradical Gmc. ō	221
12.12	Postradical Gmc. ē	223
12.13	Postradical Gmc. ɪ	223
12.14	Postradical Gmc. ā	224
12.15	Postradical Gmc. ai	224
12.16	Postradical Gmc. au	224
12.17	Postradical Gmc. eu	225
12.18	Comparison of theories	225
12.19	Synthesis	229
12.20	Concluding remarks	231
12.21	Appendix. Summary of the working hypothesis	231
Bibliography		235