

Table of Contents

Introduction	7
Part I: Egodocuments and Dutch Jewish History: Methodological Introductions
Arianne Baggerman and Rudolf Dekker: Jacques Presser, Egodocuments, and Jewish History	9
Annemiek Gringold: Voices from the Past, for Museum Visitors of Today	41
Part II: Egodocuments from Pre- and Post-Holocaust Dutch Jewish History
Tehilah van Luit: Between a Rock and a Hard Place. A Meeting with the Crooks of the Redhead Gang (1721-1727)	57
Irene Zwiép: Academic Egos: Institutions, Personalities, and the Beginnings of Jewish Studies in the Netherlands (1946-1952)	113
Evelien Gans: Between Egodocument and Ego-fiction. Ischa Meijer's Brief aan mijn moeder [Letter to My Mother] (1974)	135
David Wertheim: The Carl Friedman Affair: The Question of the Particularity of Jewish Egodocuments	153
Part III: Emotions, Imaginations, and Perceptions as Reflected in Egodocuments Dealing with the Holocaust and its Aftermath
Selma Leydesdorff: "My parents were killed in Sobibor, but it feels as if I was there": A Historian Encountering Imagination in Sobibor-Related Interviews	171
Manfred Gerstenfeld: Post-wwII Zionist Youth Movements in the Netherlands through the Lens of Interviews	191

Reina Rutlinger-Reiner: “ Me? Second Generation? ” A Personal Journey into Family History via Egodocuments	215
The Contributors	233
Index	241