

Contents

	Preface	vii
	1 Introduction	1
2	Historical roots of the psychological laboratory	17
3	Divergence of investigative practice: The repudiation of Wundt	34
4	The social structure of psychological experimentation	49
	5 The triumph of the aggregate	68
6	Identifying the subject in psychological research	88
	7 Marketable methods	101
8	Investigative practice as a professional project	118
	9 From quantification to methodolatry	136
	10 Investigating persons	156
11	The social construction of psychological knowledge	179
	Appendix	199
	Notes	201
	Index	251