

Contents

List of Figures	xvi
Introduction: Fortune's Early Modern Turn: From Pagan Goddess to Proto-Capitalist Economics	1
1. The Rise and Fall of Fortune: Imperial World History and England's Commercial Turn in Doctor Faustus (c.1588/89) and Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay (c.1589/90)	50
Imperial Ambition and the "Form of Fortune" in Marlowe's Doctor Faustus	62
The Forging of English Empire in Greene's Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay	80
2. Fortunate Returns: Venturing, Performance, and the Hidden Hand of Providence in The Merchant of Venice (c.1596) and The Four Prentices of London (c.1594)	95
Sleights of Hand: Simulations of Adventure and Risk in The Merchant of Venice	101
Theatrical Contrivance and Miraculous Reunion in The Four Prentices of London	119
3. Navigating Fortune's Global Compass: Economies of Value and Affective Labor in Old Fortunatus (c.1600) and The Fair Maid of the West, Part 1 (c.1600)	138
The Moral and Economic Regulation of Fortune in Old Fortunatus	145
Gold Digger or Golden Girl?: Negotiating Value and Worth in Fair Maid	156
4. Embracing the Unknown: Fortune at Sea and Theatrical Risk in Hamlet (1600) and Pericles (c.1608)	174
Signs Taken for Divinity: Hamlet's Voyage and the Sea of Dramatic Potentiality	181
Riding Out the Storm in Pericles : Patience, Pleasure, and Profit	191
Afterword: The Darker Side of Fortune: Taking Stock of Fortune's Ethical and Racial Costs	208
Bibliography	214
Index	227