

Contents

FABIEN ARRIBERT-NARCE, FUHITO ENDO AND
KAMILA PAWLIKOWSKA

Introduction I

PART I Perversity, Madness and Projective Reading, at the Margins of the Text: Image and Paratext in Barthes 13

ALEX WATSON

1 The Perverse Footnote: Roland Barthes's The Pleasure of the Text (1973) and the Politics of Paratextuality 15

PATRICK FFRENCH

2 To Enter Madly into the Image: Reading Projectively in Barthes 37

PART II On Pleasure, Fatigue and Death in/of the Text: Textual Exhaustion and Oscillations 59

KOHEI KUWADA

3 Pleasure and Fatigue of the Barthesian Text 61

FUHITO ENDO

4 Genealogy of Textual Necrophilia or Death Drive: Barthes,
Freud, De Man and Mehlman 67

KRISTA BONELLO RUTTER GIAPPONE

- 5 Tragicomic Pleasure and Tickling-Teasing Oscillation in John
Marston's Antonio Plays 83

- PART III Barthes and Japan, the 'Empire of Signs': Signifiance
and Undialectical Writing 105

FABIEN ARRIBERT-NARCE

- 6 Taking Signs for What They Are: Roland Barthes, Chris
Marker and the Pleasure of Texte Japon 107

ANDY STAFFORD

- 7 The Barthesian 'Double Grasp' in Japan: Reading as Undialectical Writing 129

- Bibliography 153

- Notes on Contributors 159

- Index 163