

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	vii
I. Introduction	1
II. The Principle of Substitution Salva Veritate
1. Identity of Substitutable Concepts	17
2. Concept Identity and Synonymy	21
3. Concepts and Capacities	24
4. Propositional Identity	27
5. Entity and Non-Entity	29
6. Confusions about the Substitutivity Principle	31
III. Ars Combinatoria
1. Thoughts and Signs	35
2. The Inclusion of Concepts	38
3. Logical Simples	42
4. Independence of Simple Terms	45
5. Principle of Contradiction (or Identity)	48
6. Sense and Reference	50
IV. Ideas of Sensible Qualities
1. Logic and Epistemology	52
2. Essence and Constitution	56
3. Property Identity	60
4. Physical Necessity and Logical Necessity	65
V. Subjects and Predicates (Relational and Non-Relational)
1. Surface Syntax and Logical Form	71
2. Monadic Predicates which ascribe Relational Properties	75

3. Intrinsic and Extrinsic Denomination	77
4. Denomination by Expressions referring to Sensible Qualities	79
5. Expressions referring to Dispositions	81
6. Concepts involving Coordinative Definitions and Congruence	84
7. The Logical Form of Relational Propositions	88

VI. Monads, Attributes and Relations

1. Leibniz's Definition of Attributes	94
2. Relational Properties presupposing Non-Relational Properties	95
3. Non-Relational Individuating Properties of Substances	97
4. Individual Concepts and Relational Predicates	98
5. Reification of Relations	101
6. Ideality of Space and Time	105
7. Causal Relations and the Pre-Established Harmony	111
8. Logical Possibility of Solipsism	114

VII. Necessity and Contingency

1. The Praedicatum Inest Subjecto Thesis and the distinction between Necessary and Contingent Truths	119
2. Existential Import	125
3. Essential Propositions and Existential Propositions	130
4. Proper Names and Definite Descriptions	133
5. Existence as Predicate	136
6. Concepts Resolvable at Infinity	138

Abbreviations	146
----------------------	-----

Bibliography	148
---------------------	-----

Index	153
--------------	-----