

CONTENTS

VOLUME I

INTRODUCTION Various approaches to ancient literature
 —The 'situational' approach—The 'language' of a work of art—The importance of rhetoric—The scope of this book p. 11

A. THE ARCHAIC PERIOD

Chapter I RHETORIC IN THE ARCHAIC PERIOD Greece and Rome
 —Introduction of rhetoric—Rhetoric in Cato's preface and Terence's prologues—Rhetorica ad Herennium: general character, basic concepts of rhetoric; genera causarum, officia oratoris, partes orationis; elocutio: genera dicendi, virtutes dicendi (ornatus, figurae verborum, tropi, figurae sententiarum) p. 19

Chapter II EARLY ORATORY The elder Cato (Pro Rhodiensibus)
 —Galba, Laelius, Scipio Aemilianus (Scipionum elogia) Tiberius and Gaius Gracchus—Antonius, Crassus (Rhetores Latini), Marcius Philippus—Sulpicius, Cotta p. 43

Chapter III EARLY HISTORIOGRAPHY General character. Roman history in Greek—Polybius, Cato—Cassius Hemina, Calpurnius Piso, Fannius—Coelius Antipater, Sempronius Asellio, Claudius Quadrigarius, Valerius Antias—Licinius Macer, Sisenna—Tendencies in early Roman historiography p. 67

B. THE CLASSICAL PERIOD

Chapter IV CICERO AND ASIANISM Sources of Cicero's oratorical conceptions—Hortensius—Cicero's early career (iuvenilis redundantia, Pro Roscio Amerino)—Travel to Greece and Asia Minor—Development after return: In Caecilium, Verrinae, Pro lege Manilia, Pro Rabirio—Summary p. 91

Chapter V CICERO'S ORATORICAL THEORY Cicero and the De oratore; attitude towards the Greeks; the 'philosophic' orator in book I—Book II: inventio, ordo (partes orationis, the principium), memoria—Book III: elocutio, virtutes dicendi (Latinitas, explanatio, ornatus); philosophy and rhetoric
—Ornatus in general; ornatus ex singulis verbis; the tropes
(the metaphor in Aristotle, the Auctor ad Herennium, Quintilian and Cicero), the figures of speech and Cicero's practice—Rhetoric and oratory p. 112

Chapter VI CICERO AND THE ATTICISTS Contemporaries and pupils (Crassus; Hirtius, Pansa, Dolabella, Caelius)—Attitude of the younger generation (Catullus; Calvus, Brutus)—Atticism, polemical against Cicero—Cicero's answer: the Brutus; the Orator (tripertita varietas of genera dicendi; Varro; compositio, prose rhythm: its nature and use; the period and its subdivisions; the clausula)—Other forms of Atticism: Calpidius, Caesar, Sulpicius Rufus; novum genus Thucydidiorum: Pollio, Cimber, Sallust (Epist. ad Caes.)
—Cicero versus Atticists and the verdict of Quintilian p. 136

Chapter VII HISTORIOGRAPHY IN THE LATE REPUBLIC Cicero's plans - Cicero's theories: De legibus (opus oratorium), De oratore, letter to Lucceius—Caesar's Commentarii—Atticus, Varro, Nepos. Sallust: Thucydideanism, Catonisms, poeticisms, Grecisms; conception of historiography (the prologues) —Asinius Pollio: Atticism, judgment of Cicero—Livy: judgment of Cicero and Sallust; aemulus Herodotus, poeticisms; candor, attitude towards Rome (prologue, Patavinitas) p. 168

Chapter VIII PHILOSOPHY IN THE REPUBLIC Honos alit artes (Tusc. Disp. I prol.)—Philosophy introduced: Epicureans, Stoics, Academy and Peripatos; Cicero's ideals (aemulus Platonis) —Stylistic aspects of philosophical terminology and syntactical expression—Cicero's philosophica—Brutus—Varro (Saturae Menippeae, Logistorici) p. 198

C. THE EARLY EMPIRE

Chapter IX ORATORS AND RHETORICIANS IN THE EARLY EMPIRE Argentea Latinitas—Maecenas' morals and style (Sen. ep. 114) - Classical epigoni: Augustus, Messalla Corvinus—Transition: Labienus, Cassius Severus. Vanguard of the New Style: the records of Seneca Rhetor; the declaimers: Porcius Latro, Arellius Fuscus, Albucius Silus, Iunius Gallio; Haterius, Cestius Pius—Character and contents of the Controversiae and Suasoriae—Criticism of the declamations—The generation of Tiberius; Rutilius Lupus, Cornelius Celsus; Asinius Gallus, Larcius Licinus—Atticism and Asianism: Mamercus Scaurus, Domitius Afer, Iulius Africanus, Galerius Trachalus, Eprius Marcellus, Vibius Crispus, Iulius Secundus, Afer: the New Style p. 219

Chapter X HISTORIOGRAPHY IN THE EARLY EMPIRE Influence of Sallust and Livy—Two Sallustiani, Arruntius and Trogus; other Augustan historians (Labienus)—Under Tiberius: the elder Seneca and Velleius on cultural decline; elogium of Cicero by Velleius, Aufidius Bassus, Cremutius Cordus, Bruttidius Niger; Servilius Nonianus a Sallustianus—Rôle of the New Rhetoric; Valerius Maximus—Claudius—Two Liviani: Curtius, Fabius Rusticus—The elder Pliny—Summary p. 243

Chapter XI PHILOSOPHY IN THE EARLY EMPIRE Rhetoric and philosophy; the diatribe; the Sextii, Celsus, Papirius Fabianus—Seneca ep. 100 on Papirius Fabianus and philosophical style; Lucilius. Philosophical terminology—Seneca ep. 114 on the moral aspects of style; typology of corruption; attitude to Modernism; Stoic theory of style—Quintilian's criticism of Seneca; Gellius and Fronto on Seneca—Formation of Seneca's style p. 260

D. THE CLASSICIST AND ARCHAIST PERIODS

Chapter XII THE CLASSICIST MOVEMENT Reactions against the New Style: Petronius, Messalla (Tac. Dial.), Quintilian—Moderate Classicism of Quintilian: the schools of rhetoric, the declamations—Quintilian's criticism of Seneca: corrupta elocutio, minutissimae sententiae—Quintilian's views of Latin as compared to Greek—Quintilian's rhetorical system—Character and structure of the Institutio oratoria—Elocutio; relative importance of style—Ornatus: verba singula, sermo coniunctus—General qualities of ornatus: evidentia, amplificatio and minutio, sententiae—Ornatus proper: tropes (allegory, hyperbole); figures of thought ('figura', emphasis); figures of speech; compositio—Quintilian's Classicism p. 287

Chapter XIII CLASSICIST ORATORY Quintilian's views on poetry and poeticus cultus—His history of oratory—Quintilian on Cicero and the Atticists—His typology of style—Tacitus on oratory in the Dialogus; his σεμνότης as an orator—Pliny: professed Ciceronianism; literary ideas as defended against Asianist and Atticist contemporaries; modernized Ciceronian ubertas; oratory for art's sake; the Panegyric p. 311

Chapter XIV CLASSICIST HISTORIOGRAPHY—Quintilian on history and historians (Herodotus, Thucydides; Livy, Sallust)—Pliny on historiography; his plans and conceptions—Tacitus' conversion to history (Dialogus); Agricola, Germania—Historiae; shift of subject—Annales: digression book 4, Crementius Cordus—Tacitus and Maternus; emphasis and allusion—Influence of Sallust: Tacitean style, poeticisms, Thucydides—Influence of Livy: the speech of Claudius—Influence of the New Rhetoric—Literary portraits and sketches compared to Sallust—Sallust and Tacitus—Suetonius p. 329
Quintilian on philosophy and philosophers—Sublimitas—Pliny and philosophy—Philosophy going Greek p. 361

Chapter XV THE END Character of the second century A. D. Hadrian, Suetonius; Archaism—Literary ideas of Fronto and Gellius—Oratorical practice: Fronto, Apuleius p. 364 Historiography—the epitome: Florus, Justin—The amplificatio: Lucian's warnings and Fronto's Bellum Parthicum—Fronto's Sallustianism—Gellius. The fate of history in Rome p. 373
Philosophy: Apuleius, Epictetus, Marcus Aurelius—Philosophy gone Greek p. 379

EPILOGUE: ORATIONIS RATIO The Roman passion for rhetoric—Rhetoric beneficial or detrimental?—Rhetoric and the Roman mind—The limitations of this book p. 380

VOLUME II

Notes p. 385
Bibliography p. 519
Index nominum p. 529
Index vocabulorum p. 535
Index locorum p. 551