

Contents

List of illustrations	xi
X Preface	xiii
X 1 'SUCH STUFF AS DREAMS ARE MADE OF'	1
Introduction: 'High' literature and 'popular' genres	3
The un-American villain and the all-American man's man	13
What do women really want? The ladies' man and the sinking of the ' Louisa '	28
2 SOME PARABLES OF A WOMAN'S TALENT: ANGELS OF MUSIC, DEMON LOVERS AND RED SHOES	39
'The angel of music'	45
The prima donna	52
'A dread powerful demon'	59
'The real red shoes'	67
The Faustian conflict	77
The primal parable	82
Resisting ideology	86
Life and art	95
3 FROM 'KING LEAR' TO 'KING KONG' AND BACK: SHAKESPEARE AND POPULAR MODERN GENRES	103
In general	105
In particular	121
Shakespeare and politics	131
4 IDENTITIES AND IDENTIFICATIONS	139
Binary oppositions: split personalities and wicked women	141
'High literature' and Gone With the Wind : The stress on sameness	152
The construction of identity: princesses, paupers, trading places and altered states	167
Enemy aliens and dramatic empathies	176

Notes	185
References	203
Index	211