

THE SCOTTISH
INVENTION OF ENGLISH
LITERATURE

EDITED BY ROBERT CRAWFORD

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Notes on contributors	page ix
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction Robert Crawford	I
1 From Rhetoric to Criticism Neil Rhodes	22
2 Adam Smith, Samuel Johnson and the institutions of English Ian Duncan	37
3 The 'eloquence of the Bar': Hugh Blair's Lectures , professionalism and Scottish legal education Rajit S. Dosanjh	55
4 Hugh Blair's Ossian, Romanticism and the teaching of Literature Fiona Stafford	68
5 The entrance of the novel into the Scottish universities Paul G. Bator	89
6 William Greenfield: gender and the transmission of literary culture Martin Moonie	103
7 An evolutionary microcosm: the teaching of Literature and aesthetics at Aberdeen Joan H. Pittock	116
8 The early impact of Scottish literary teaching in North America Franklin E. Court	134

9	Scottish academia and the invention of American Studies Andrew Hook	164
10	Scottish Rhetoric and the formation of literary studies in nineteenth-century England Linda Ferreira-Buckley	180
11	'A centre at the edge': Scotland and the early teaching of Literature in Australia and New Zealand Chris Worth	207
12	Scottish Literature and English Studies Robert Crawford	225
	Index	247