

Contents

| | |
|---|---------------|
| Foreword by Philip Collins | page 7 |
| Part I Introduction | |
| Preface | 13 |
| Chapter 1 Genesis of a New Theme | 19 |
| 1. The Mechanical Muse | 19 |
| 2. Prose Quarries | 26 |
| Chapter 2 The Gospel of Self-Help | 35 |
| 1. The Reluctant Labourer | 40 |
| 2. Divine Aid | 45 |
| 3. The Villager | 53 |
| 4. The Industrial Proletarian | 58 |
| 5. The Self-Made Industrialist | 66 |
| Chapter 3 Towards a New Sensibility | 75 |
| 1. A Choir of Larks | 77 |
| 2. Deceptive Good | 81 |
| 3. The Human Engine | 91 |
| 4. The Cruel Nation | 98 |
| Chapter 4 The Ambivalence of a Generation | 109 |

Part 2 Anthology

| | |
|--|----------|
| William Paley (1743–1805) | page 131 |
| Prefatory note | 131 |
| Equality, as consistent with the British Constitution, in a Dialogue between a Master-Manufacturer, and one of his Workmen (1793) | 139 |
| Hannah More (1745–1833) | 147 |
| Prefatory note | 147 |
| Village Politics, addressed to all the Mechanics, Journeymen, and Labourers in Great Britain. By Will Chip, a Country Carpenter. A Dialogue between Jack Anvil, the Blacksmith, – and Tom Hod, the Mason (1793) | 157 |
| ‘The Lancashire Collier Girl’ (1795) | 169 |
| William Godwin (1756–1836) | 177 |
| Prefatory note | 177 |
| Fleetwood, or the New Man of Feeling (1805), chapters 11–14 | 189 |
| Harriet Martineau (1802–1876) | 211 |
| Prefatory note | 211 |
| ‘A Manchester Strike’ (1832) | 225 |
| Charlotte Elizabeth Tonna (1790–1846) | 303 |
| Prefatory note | 303 |
| The Wrongs of Woman: ‘The Little Pin-Headers’ (1843) | 313 |
| Richard Henry (or Hengist) Horne (1802–1884) | 359 |
| Prefatory note | 359 |
| ‘The True Story of a Coal Fire’ (1850) | 367 |
| Bibliography | 401 |
| Index | 413 |