

Contents

---

List of illustrations	page xi
A note on conventions	xiii
Acknowledgements	xv
Introduction	1
Part I The invention of London	21
1 The city and humanism	23
The city, the state, and the advent of humanism	23 x
Representing the city and the self	32 x
The plotting of Utopia	40
2 London and the languages of Tudor complaint	63
Social change and the structures of complaint	63
The world turned upside-down	77
Markets, exchange, and the erosion of difference	91
The displaced plowman	98
Production and consumption	103
Projectors	106
New triangulations: country, court, and city	110
The two cities: vocation	113
Mundane utopias	117
Part II Fictions of settlement	123
3 From matron to monster: London and the languages of description	125
Fictions of settlement	125
Paradigms and personification	135
Changing identities	156
4 The emergence of a Tudor capital: Spenser's epic vision	168
The river and the city: epic, time, and culture	168
Troynovant and the translation of culture	180
Dynasty and destiny	200

5	Scripts for the pageant: the ceremonies of London	212
	A tale of two cities: the symbiosis of ceremonial forms	212
	The ceremonial route and its syntax	221
	The king's advent: miracle and discourse in the royal entry	241
	From ritual to myth in the civic year	258
	The impression of the figure: the meaning of the inaugural script	275
Part III Techniques of settlement		295
6	"To be a man in print": pamphlet morals and urban culture	297
	Word and sword: techniques of settlement	297
	Prodigality and the language of romance	312
	Ghosts: projects and projections of Nashe and Greene	320
	Cony-catching: anatomy of anatomies	341
	The continuing city: Dekker's heterocosm	355
7	Essential difference: the projects of satire	372
	The art of discrimination	372
	"Poetic vaine circumference": the isolation of the satirist	390
	Proverbs, epigrams, and urbanity	409
8	The uses of enchantment: Jacobean city comedy and romance	431
	Haunted houses: the interplay of comic forms in the theater repertory	431
	Understanding: the penetration of comic perspective	453
	The romance of the second generation	469
Part IV The dissemination of urban culture		479
9	Metropolis: the creation of an august style	481
	A "place for verse": poetry and metropolitan sensibility	481
	"Masters of truth": the good life and the circuit of legitimation	497
	"The vast vicissitude of forms": the institution and dissemination of the social mode	516
10	In place of place: London and liberty in the Puritan Revolution	531
	"To your tents, O Israel!": the city and the people	531
	Strong men: Revolution and moral growth	544
	"The utmost prospect of reformation": Personhood and place in Paradise Lost	566
	Index	583