

CONTENTS

PREFACE	vii
CUE TITLES	xv
INTRODUCTION. STYLE AS MEANING
i. Style and meaning in ancient and modern rhetorical theory	1
ii. Language as esthetic medium	3
iii. Style as detail of meaning	9
I. PARALLELISM
i. Nature of parallelism	15
ii. Range and emphasis	20
iii. Antithesis I	22
iv. Parallelism in Addison, Johnson, Hazlitt	24
v. Range and emphasis in Addison, Johnson, Hazlitt	32
II. ANTITHESIS
i. Nature of antithesis	38
ii. Antithesis in Addison, Johnson, Hazlitt	43
III. DICATION
i. Approach to Johnson's diction	50
ii. Particular and general, concrete and abstract, sensory and non-sensory	52
iii. Johnson's tendency to the general, abstract, non-sensory	54
iv. His "philosophic" diction	59
IV. OTHER QUALITIES
i. Sentence-length	63
ii. Imagery	64
iii. Inversion	67
iv. Chiasmus	71
V. CONSISTENCY OF JOHNSON'S STYLE
i. His conversation	74
ii. His letters	78
iii. Consistency of his prose writings	81
VI. JOHNSON'S THEORY—I
i. Conflict of critical utterances, ambiguity of generalities	89
ii. "The grandeur of generality"	93
iii. Johnson's disdain of simple statement of fact—as in history, or in Swift's writing	96

iv. His ideal of elaboration; his view of meaning—things, notions, words	100
VII. JOHNSON'S THEORY—II
i. His dislike of "low" terms	104
ii. His dislike of "terms of art"	106
iii. His "philosophic" terms	109
VIII. ANTECEDENTS OF JOHNSON'S STYLE
i. Suggestions of Hawkins and Boswell—seventeenth-century writers, especially religious	115
ii. Browne and "philosophic" diction	117
iii. "Philosophic diction" and scientific reading	120
iv. Temple, Chambers, the rhetoric of the neoclassic couplet	124
v. Johnson's antecedents shared by his contemporaries	128
IX. EFFECTS OF JOHNSON'S STYLE
i. Contemporary response to Johnson's style	133
ii. Johnson's friends, admirers, and critics as imitators	135
iii. Effects of Johnson's style on English prose in general	140
iv. Parodies of his style, 1752–1938	144
APPENDICES
A Johnson's punctuation	149
B Statistics of Johnson's style according to different compilers	150
C Johnson's revision and recasting	152
D Johnson on "cadence"	155
E Johnson and the Book of Common Prayer	157
INDEX	159