

CONTENTS

---

7		IV The greatest happiness principle post-1840: the return to Bentham	638
MONEY AND BANKING:		V The return to Bentham continued: on 'utilitarianism' and the status of justice	645
THEORY AND POLICY	483	VI The greatest happiness principle: some comparisons and problems	656
I The law of markets:		VII Liberty, utility and social control	661
general issues	483	VIII The labour problem and private property: some preliminary implications	669
II The law of markets:		IX On compensation	672
early formulations	487	X Utility versus natural rights: applications to labour and property	673
III The Principles : the cyclical context	513
IV The quantity theory	520	9
V Money and the rate of interest	531	ECONOMIC POLICY: THE ROLE OF GOVERNMENT	677
VI Bank finance and the cycle: implications for monetary policy	544	I Introduction	677
VII On the control of central banking	583	II The case for 'free trade'	685
VIII Concluding note	598	III Government provision: negative considerations	689
		IV The case from liberty: consumer choice	693
8		V Market failure	696
ON UTILITY AND LIBERTY	602
I Introduction: the Schumpeterian version of Benthamism	602
II The Benthamite position: a summary statement	607
III The greatest happiness principle: the reaction from Bentham	617

vi CONTENTS

VI Elementary education	700	I Introduction	825
VII 'Superior' education	718	II Equality of opportunity and property rights	827
VIII Professional training	720	III Land reform: distributive aspects	833
IX Mill and education: an overview	724	IV Land reform: efficiency aspects	839
X Foreign trade policy	729	V Land reform: Ireland	847
XI Government and economic development	738	VI On endowment and property rights	855
XII Population control, poor relief and full employment policy	741	VII Income distribution and public finance	858
XIII On local and central administration	747	VIII On inheritance	876
XIV The labour market: regulation of hours and unions	749	IX Limitations on bequests and distribution: diminishing utility	880
XV Colonization	753	X The desirability of economic development and the stationary state	881
XVI Monopoly and the state	758	XI The condition of the people: the poverty trap and the solution	888
XVII Patent protection	762	XII The condition of the people: trade unionism	897
XVIII Summary: progress and the state	763	XIII Mill and 'bourgeois' bias	907
10
ECONOMIC POLICY: SOCIAL ORGANIZATION	770	CONCLUSION: SOME CENTRAL THEMES	913
I Introduction	770	I Mill, Ricardianism and the historical school	913
II Aspects of the indictment of capitalism	776	II Mill and neo-classicism	928
III The Communist solution	786	III Mill and marginal utility	934
IV The St Simonian and Fourierist solutions	800	IV Mill and mathematical economics	936
V Profit-sharing	808	V Mill and Malthusianism	945
VI Co-operation: prospects and advantages	810	VI The charge of 'scientism'	955
VII The collectivist option rejected	819	VII The empirical dimension: on the 'reality' of axioms and model improvement	958
VIII On Socialism: summary	820
11
ECONOMIC POLICY: THE REFORM PROGRAMME	825

Appendix: Attitudes towards birth control	968	BIBLIOGRAPHY	979
Appendix: The Hubbard Issue	971	INDEX	1006
Appendix: On the Socialist Conference	977		