

Contents

Acknowledgments 11

Introduction 13

Strange(r) Things: Fiction and Frankenstein 13

“Voodoo Metaphysics”? Towards a New Sense of Make-Believe 20

Endlessly Transparent? Frankenstein, Literary Criticism, and the Logic of Reflection 27

The Transformation of Stories:
Adaptation, Mediation, and the Real of Intertextuality 35

Figures, Repetition, Company: Where to Look for What Frankenstein Does 43

Part One: Figures

Narrative Interest and the Body

Mary Shelley’s Frankenstein (1818) 57

No Body, no Story... 57

Difficult Material 63

Figures 67

Speak and Be 70

Truth, Judgment, Fiction 78

Physicality and Perspective

Bernard Rose’s Frankenstein (2015) 85

Narrative Architecture 85

Voices and Images	90
Productive Foldings	97
The Body of Narrative Plot	102
Contingencies, Technological and Organic	105
The Substance of Fiction	110

Part One: Coda	115
-----------------------------	-----

Part Two: Repetition

Sequels: Going Forward, Looking Back

James Whale's Bride of Frankenstein (1935) and John Logan's Penny Dreadful (2014–16)	127
That Was Not the End At All	127
A Resurrection in Three Parts	131
Generation without Origin	135
Traces, Path-Breakers	137
Begin and End	140
Operation in Two Directions	145

Repeating Repetition: Series and Singularity

Penny Dreadful , the Second	151
Series and Adaptations	151
Repetition Unbound	155
Creature No. 3	158
Making Memories	163
Tracing the Individual	167
Repetition, High and Low	172
Being and Being-About	175
Surfaces and Simulacra	177
Beyond Sovereign Imitation	182

Part Two: Coda	185
-----------------------------	-----

Part Three: Company

Imperfection and Collaboration

Rose's Frankenstein Revisited, and the National Theatre's
Frankenstein (2011) 197

You Will Be You Again 197

Double Casting I 202

Ontology of Non-Self-Coincidence 210

Existence as Production 213

Collaborative Agency 217

Strange Intimacies: Vulnerability and Liberation

Theodore Roszak's The Memoirs of Elizabeth Frankenstein (1995), and Bride of Frankenstein (Again) 221

Intimacy Inhibited 221

Feral Woman 224

A More Cryptic Feminist Text 234

Vulnerability and Imagination 236

Double Casting II 241

Address and Response 244

Both Strange and Familiar 247

Genuine Transformations 251

Part Three: Coda 255

To Conclude

"Love Your Monsters" 259

Works Cited 279