

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface	5
Acknowledgements	7
List of Abbreviations	13
1. INTRODUCTION	15
1.1 Hans Reichenbach's Grammar	15
1.2 Why Reichenbach's Grammar is Interesting	16
1.3 The Nature of Reichenbach's "Analysis of Conversational Language" — Preliminary Discussion	17
1.3.1 Interpretations of Reichenbach's Endeavor	17
1.3.1.1 Weaver — A Language for Mechanical Translation among Natural Languages.	17
1.3.1.2 R. M. Martin — A Universal Scientific Language	18
1.3.1.3 Uriel Weinreich — A Theory of Semantic Universals	19
1.3.1.4 A Universal Grammar for all Natural Languages	19
1.3.2 Reichenbach's Conception of his Endeavor	20
1.3.2.1 Reichenbach's Motivation in Writing a Grammar	20
1.3.2.2 Reichenbach on the Nature of Logistic Grammar	21
1.3.2.2.1 Logic	21
1.3.2.2.2 Language	25
1.3.2.2.3 Grammar	28
1.3.2.2.4 Logistic Grammar	34
1.4 Summary of Subsequent Chapters	37
2. THE CATEGORIES OF LOGISTIC GRAMMAR	39
2.1 Aim of this Chapter	39
2.2 The Three Primary Categories	39
2.2.1 Definition of Primary Categories	39
2.2.2 History of the Threefold Distinction	45
2.3 Outline of Reichenbach's Logistic Grammar	53
2.3.1 The Inter-Sentential Layer	56
2.3.2 The Intra-Sentential Layer	57
2.3.2.1 Arguments	58

2.3.2.2	Functions	64
2.3.2.3	Logical Terms	66
2.3.3	The Ultimate Constituent Layer	66
2.3.3.1	Arguments	66
2.3.3.2	Functions	67
2.3.3.3	Logical Terms	73
2.4	Comparison of Reichenbach's Categories with Traditional Parts of Speech	83
3.	THREE THEORIES OF GRAMMAR	95
3.1	Traditional Grammatical Theory	95
3.1.1	Dionysius Thrax and the Parts of Speech	96
3.1.2	Definitions of Categories	99
3.1.3	Universal Grammar	103
3.1.4	The Scientific Status of Grammar	106
3.1.4.1	Discovery	106
3.1.4.2	Explanation	117
3.1.4.3	Verification	118
3.1.5	The Semantic Basis of Grammatical Theory	118
3.2	Structural Linguistics — Bloomfield and Harris	119
3.2.1	Structural Definitions	126
3.2.2	The Critique of "Prescriptivism"	135
3.2.2.1	What Prescriptive Grammar Is	136
3.2.2.2	The Need for Theory in Grammar	140
3.2.2.3	Theory vs. Prescriptivism in Traditional Grammar	148
3.3	Chomsky's Transformational Grammar	152
3.3.1	A General Theory of Grammar vs. Particular Grammars.	152
3.3.2	Generative Grammar	153
3.3.2.1	Phrase-Structure Grammar	155
3.3.2.2	Transformational Grammar	157
3.3.2.2.1	The Earlier Theory	160
3.3.2.2.2	The Later Theory — Subcategorization Rules	164
3.3.3	The Relation between Syntax and Semantics	173
3.3.4	The Revival of Universal Grammar	181
3.3.5	Explanation in Linguistic Theory	186
3.3.5.1	Critique of Descriptivism	187
3.3.5.2	The Elements of Grammatical Theory	191
3.3.5.3	The Adequacy of a Linguistic Theory	197
4.	REICHENBACH'S GRAMMAR IN HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE.	205
4.1	Reichenbach's Approach to Definition	205
4.1.1	Arguments and Functions	206

4.1.2 Logical Terms	209
4.1.2.1 Syntactic Terms	211
4.1.2.2 Semantic Terms	212
4.1.2.3 Pragmatic Terms	216
4.2 Reichenbach as a Universal Grammarian	223
4.2.1 Reichenbach and Traditional Grammar	223
4.2.2 Reichenbach and Chomsky.	229
4.3 Reichenbach's Theory of Translation	234
4.3.1 The Need for Translating into SL	234
4.3.2 The Logical Structure of CL	242
4.4 Discovery, Explanation, and Justification	248
4.5 Logistic Grammar Viewed as a Generative Grammar	255
5. AN EVALUATION OF REICHENBACH'S WORK	269
5.1 The Semantic Basis of Logistic Grammar	269
5.2 Reichenbach's Prescriptivism	272
5.3 The Adequacy of Logistic Grammar	275
Bibliography	279
Index	283