

CONTENTS

---

Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction. Rousseau: the life and the work	1
(A) Geneva: an eccentric upbringing (1712–28)	1
(B) Savoy and France: discovery and loss of love (1728–42)	2
(C) Paris, with Venetian interlude: formation of a writer,         subverting the Enlightenment ‘from within’ (1742–55)	2
(D) Montmorency, Montlouis: the maturing of a genius (1756–62)	4
(E) Switzerland, England, France: years of exile (1762–70)	5
(F) Return to Paris: a life withdrawn (1770–8)	7
(G) Sickness and solitude	8
(H) The three axes of Rousseau’s thought	9
(I) Hume’s generous judgment	10
I Rousseau’s divided thought: the morality of the senses and the morality of duty	11
(A) Two themes in tension	11
(B) ‘Man is a naturally good creature’	15
(C) ‘That great maxim of morality’	16
(D) Contradiction	17
(E) Imagination and amour-propre	17
(F) Three strategies of identification	18
(G) Julie’s ‘Elysium’: dialectic of nature and art	21
(H) The perils of manipulation and bad faith	22
(I) ‘Virtue is a state of war’	25
(J) The fate of the morality of the senses	28
(K) Romanticism and reason: two perspectives on the morality of         the senses	29

II	The Discourse on the Origin of Inequality Among Men	33
	(A) Time and 'the sciences of man'	34
	(B) 'Nascent man' in the 'pure state of nature'	40
	(C) Emergence from nature via the 'combination of several extraneous causes'	49
	(D) Civil society, the specious contract and despotism	53
	(E) Finale	57
III	The Emile	59
	(A) Introduction. Rousseau's judgment on the Emile	59
	(B) The form of the treatise/novel	61
	(C) Natural and social	61
	(D) Negative education and the art of timing	65
	(E) Reason and reasoning	68
	(F) Reason: the method and the goal. Drawing and geometry	73
	(G) Reason: the method and the goal. Physics	75
	(H) Physics and morality: tricks with the conjuror	76
	(I) Stoicism: reining in the imagination, closing the gap between desires and reality	77
	(J) An education for autonomy. Stages of autonomy and authority	80
	(K) Freedom, judgment, knowledge	83
IV	The Social Contract : principles of right	87
	(A) Introduction: the Social Contract, an uncompleted fragment	87
	(B) Right and fact	90
	(C) Nature and convention	91
	(D) Errors of the predecessors	94
	(E) The legitimate contract: free-riders and the 'remarkable change in man'	96
	(F) Interests and rationality	101
	(G) Legitimacy and property	102
V	The empire of the laws: the general will and totalitarianism	109
	(A) The empire of the laws	109
	(B) Total alienation: the contractual basis of absolutism	111
	(C) Conditions of emergence of the general will: no major inequalities, no factions	114
	(D) No factions: Rousseau's anxiety concerning pluralism	118
	(E) Voting procedures to guarantee the emergence of the general will	120
	(F) Legal voluntarism	122
	Appendix I Internal and external sanctions: the voice of conscience and the free-rider	125
	Appendix II Interests, free-riders and the general will	129
	Appendix III 'Conventions' and 'contracts'	130

VI	The Social Contract : maxims of politics	133
	(A) The people	133
	(B) 'Institutional systems'	135
	(C) 'The form of government'	136
	(D) Maxims drawn from history: the inference from the existent to the possible	152
	(E) Moeurs: laws 'engraved in the hearts of the citizens'	155
	(F) Cosmopolitanism and 'the little platoon'	157
VII	Amour-propre	162
	(A) The genesis of amour-propre	163
	(B) Amour-propre as the key to socialization: the Emile	166
	(C) Amour-propre: positive pole	171
	(D) Amour-propre: negative pole	173
	(E) From positive to negative: the mechanism of degeneration	175
	(F) Amour-propre, self-esteem, pride and vanity	178
	(G) Towards an anarchic egalitarianism?	179
VIII	Men and women	180
	(A) An anthropology of identity: the Second Discourse	181
	(B) A politics of difference: the Third Discourse	186
	(C) A culture of difference: the Letter to d'Alembert	188
	(D) A psychology of difference: the Emile	191
	(E) An education for difference: 'Sophie, ou de la femme'	193
	(F) The natural and the social	200
IX	Language	202
	(A) The search for origins in history and psychology	202
	(B) From passive to active: linearity and 'l'arbitraire du signe'	207
	(C) The origin of languages: two dilemmas	209
	(D) 'Le génie des langues'	211
	(E) The development of language	213
	(F) Language and liberation: two dénouements	215
	(G) Rousseau's position in the history of linguistics	219
X	Religion and politics	221
	(A) Introduction. Social Contract IV.8 'On civil religion'	221
	(B) Historical sketch	222
	(C) Abstract typology	223
	(D) Normative programme	226
	(E) The problem of toleration	227
XI	Negative theology: revealed religion criticized	235
	(A) Rousseau's religiosity	235
	(B) Rousseau and the Vicar	237
	(C) The critique of revelation: scripture and interpretation	238

CONTENTS

(D) No original sin	241
(E) No personal providence	245
(F) No miracles. Prayer as rational communication, not entreaty	247
XII Positive theology: natural religion defended	250
(A) Article I: 'A will moves the universe'	250
(B) Article II: 'Matter moved according to certain laws shows me an intelligence'. Rousseau vs. Diderot	252
(C) Article III: 'Man is . . . free in his actions and as such is animated by an immaterial substance'	258
(D) Religion and morality	262
(E) Religion, order and 'seeing as'	265
Appendix Rousseau and Kant	269
Concluding reflections	271
Notes	273
Bibliography and reference conventions	299
Index	309