

Contents

Notes on the Contributors	vii
Editor's Preface	x
Acknowledgements	xiii
1 Parameters of syntactic change: a notional view John Anderson	1
2 Change and metatheory at the beginning of the 1990s: the primacy of history Raimo Anttila	43
3 Typology and reconstruction Bernard Comrie	74
4 On the phonetic basis of phonological change Patricia Donegan	98
5 Internally and externally motivated change in language contact settings: doubts about dichotomy Nancy C. Dorian	131
6 How real(ist) are reconstructions? Roger Lass	156
7 Why UG needs a learning theory: triggering verb movement David Lightfoot	190

8	On the social origins of language change	215
	James Milroy
9	The phonetics of sound change	237
	John Ohala
10	Nicaraguan English in history	279
	Wayne O'Neil
11	Language change as language improvement	319
	Theo Vennemann
12	Bidirectional diffusion in sound change	345
	William S-Y Wang and Chinfa Lien
	Index	401