

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	xiii
List of mothers and mothers-to-be	xv
Part I THEORY	1
1 The 'phenomenon' of single parenting by choice	3
The women's movement; The nuclear family; Early pioneers and the gradual change in society's expectations; Some statistics on single parenting; Is social class or race relevant?; A few notes about the mothers; Single parenthood by choice versus marriage; A taste of the reality
2 The women's movement	35
The growth of the women's movement; Where we're at now; Sexual relationships; Women's changing view of themselves; Motherhood
3 Man as stud	67
Man as stud; Is man 'haunted' because 'he is "of woman born"?'; Man face to face with the New Woman; Men wanting children without women; Men's rights over their children

4 Why women make the choice	91
The difficulty of finding Mr Right; Is she a special kind of woman?; 'It never occurred to me I wouldn't have a child one day'; Lesbian mothers; Is it selfish to choose to have a child as a single mother?; Having a stake in the future, and the need for a blood tie; The biological urge; The biological clock, or, The age factor
5 Family	130
The state of marriage today; Women's relationships with their own families; The ideal marriage; A comparison between married and single parenthood; Can single parents make a family?; The future of the family
Part 2 PRACTICE	171
6 Action	173
Getting pregnant: (1) the traditional way; Getting pregnant: (2) by artificial insemination; Getting ready; Associations and self-help groups; Extended families; The birth
7 Problems and joys	223
Fitting your career around having a child; The financial aspects of single parenthood; Problems and . . . ; . . . and joys; Appointing guardians; What chance of a new lover?; Letting go; How other people react
8 The children, and more about men	264
The effect on children; Father's relationships with their children; Where's my daddy?; Role models

Part 3 'SHALL I, SHAN'T I?'	303
9 'Shall I, shan't I?'	305
What the mothers say
Postscript	313
Notes	314