

Table of Contents

Wittgensteinian Exercises. An Invitation to the Readers	ix
Lucilla Guidi
SECTION I
Transformative Paths: Philosophical Exercises and Aesthetic Practices
1. Are We Having Fun Yet?	3
Beth Savickey
2. Projective Imagination. Therapy and Improvisation in Wittgenstein's (and Cavell's) Vision of Language	19
Davide Sparti
3. Frame and Framing as Transformative Practices: On the Parergonal Constitution of Artworks	45
Eva Schürmann
4. Wittgenstein—Philosophy as Aesthetic Practice	63
Katrin Wille
5. Working on Oneself. Philosophical Exercises in Wittgenstein and Valéry	89
Andreas Hetzel
SECTION II
Philosophical Exercises and Ethical Transformations
6. The Dissolution of Philosophical Problems and the Transformation of Thinking	111
Oskari Kuusela
7. Transformative Thinking: Wittgenstein and Dewey on the Power of Reflection	137
Jörg Volbers

8. Between Captivity and Liberation: The Role of Pictures in Wittgenstein's Philosophy	165
Anna Boncompagni
9. Wittgenstein and the Art of Conversing with Oneself: The Philosophical Investigations as a Book of Exercises	187
Lars Leeten
10. Resistances of the Will Must be Overcome: Wittgenstein on the Difficulty of Philosophy	207
Andrew Norris

SECTION III

Practicing Philosophy in a Wittgensteinian Spirit

11. "Slab, I shouted, slab!" Gender Identities, Language, and Possibilities of Limitation and Liberation	235
Anne-Marie Søndergaard Christensen
12. Að hugsa á íslensku og útlensku / Thinking in Icelandic and Foreign Tongues / Auf Isländisch und in Fremdsprachen denken	255
Logi Gunnarsson
List of Contributors	299
Acknowledgments	303