

CONTENTS

0. Introduction	1
1. Scope of the subject	6
1.1 'American'	6
1.2 'Structuralism'	8
1.3 Termini and Topics	11
1.3.1 Terminus a quo	12
1.3.2 Range of topics	12
1.3.3 Terminus ad quem	18
2. Materials and methodology	22
2.1 Sources used and models followed	22
2.2 Existing kinds of historiographic writing	26
2.2.1 Histories of linguistics	27
2.2.2 Methodological studies as textbooks	28
2.2.3 Textbooks	32
2.2.4 Articles	35
2.2.5 Anthologies	40
2.2.6 Surveys, trends, and stock-takings	41
2.2.7 Lexicons and bibliographies	41
2.2.8 Biographies	42
3. Emergence of an academic profession	42
3.1 Philology	48
3.2 Language teaching	62
3.3 Dialectology	65
3.4 Anthropology	67
3.5 Psychology	77
3.6 Phonetics	77
4. Principal figures	78
4.1 Boas	79
4.2 Sapir	82
4.3 Whorf	97
4.4 Bloomfield	100

vi Contents

5.	Successive approaches	116
5.1	The Bloomfieldian period	116
5.1.1	The rise of descriptive linguistics	117
5.1.2	Predecessors	120
5.1.3	Intellectual core and representative genres	122
5.1.4	Growth and pace	126
5.2	Diversity and development of Bloomfieldian work	127
5.2.1	Mapping the diversity	128
5.2.2	Networks of interaction	131
5.2.3	Development in time	133
5.2.4	Trager and Smith	138
5.2.5	Harris	142
5.2.6	Second phase	151
5.3	Explanations of Bloomfieldian work	157
5.3.1	Introduction	157
5.3.2	Rejection of ‘mentalism’	161
5.3.3	Absence of ‘theory’: ‘Generative aspects’	165
5.3.4	Absence of theory: universals and explanations	174
5.3.5	Absence of theory: discovery procedures	176
5.3.6	On explaining Bloomfieldian theory	186
6.	History of problems	190
7.	Toward historical adequacy	218
7.1	Neglected topics (1): forms of expression	218
7.1.1	Genres	219
7.1.2	Styles	220
7.1.3	Terminology	220
7.2	Neglected topics (2): Terms for patterns	222
7.2.1	‘School’	223
7.2.2	Movements and traditions	227
7.2.3	Movements, paradigms, and traditions	228
7.2.4	Drift	232
7.3	Underlying relations (1): The ‘red thread’	233
7.4	Underlying relations (2): Periodization	239
8.	Epilogue, 1979	244
8.1	Overview	244
8.1.1	Perceptions of crisis and climax	247
8.2	Haas and Uhlenbeck	251
8.3	References to the Epilogue	256
	References	259
	Index of names	290
	Index to periodicals mentioned	295
	Index to organizations	296