Contents

Preface XI

I. Introduction 1
I.1. The Causal Theory of Proper Names 1
I.2. Proper Names, Reference, and Intention 4
I.3. The Strong Theory of Relational Attitudes 6
I.4. The Program 9

Part One: Referring

II. Referring: The Framework Theory 15
II.1. Referring as Meaning 15
II.2. Searle's Account of Referring 18
II.3. The Definition of Referring 19
II.4. The Predicate 21
II.5. Correlation 22
II.6. Specification of Referent 27
II.7. Non-identifying Reference 28
II.8. Concluding Remarks 30

III. The Strong Theory of Referring 33
III.1. The Strong Definition 33
III.2. The Strong Theory and Causality 35
III.3. Singular Terms and Presupposition 37
III.4. Determination of Referent 41
III.5. Excluded Cases 42
III.6. Concluding Remarks 46

IV. The Weak Theory of Referring 48
IV.1. Causality and Presupposition 48
IV.2. Proper Names 51
IV.3. Determination of Referent 53
IV.4. Cases of Referring 56
IV.5. Concluding Remarks 57

V. The Case for the Causal Theory 59
V.1. The Appeal to Cases 59
V.2. Argument from Demonstration 61
V.3. The Case for the Causal Theory 62

Part Two: Relational Attitudes

VI. The Richness Condition: Introduction 65
VI.1. The Kaplan Account 65
VI.2. The Differences Defended 68
VI.3. My Account of Richness 71

VII. A Formulation for the Richness Condition 73
VII.1. First Stage 73
VII.2. Second Stage 74
VII.3. Relation 79
VII.4. Knowledge 82
VII.5. Third Stage 83
VII.6. Context Variability 85
VII.7. Fourth Stage 87
VII.8. Concluding Remarks 90

VIII. A Pragmatic Account of the Richness Condition 92
VIII.1. The Preliminaries 92
VIII.2. The Main Argument for Belief 93
VIII.3. The Subsidiary Argument for Belief 96
VIII.4. Intention and Other Special Cases 99
VIII.5. Cancellation 102
VIII.6. Notional Attitude Expressions 104
VIII.7. Summary 107
VIII.8. Relational Attitudes 110

IX. Referring Concluded 112
IX.1. The Weak Theory of Referring 112
IX.2. Notional Specification of the Referent 114
IX.3. The Implicatures of 'Referring' 118
IX.4. Determination of Referent 120
IX.5. Referring, Causality, and Rigid Designation 122

Part Three: Proper Names

X. A Theory of Proper Names 127
X.1. The Problem of Proper Names 128
X.2. Unambiguous Names 130
X.3. The Semantics of Unambiguous Names 133
X.4. The Problem of Ambiguity 134
X.5. Ambiguous Names: The Semantic Issues 138
X.6. Concluding Remarks 140

XI. Indexicals and Rigid Designation 143
XI.1. Indexicals in Modal Contexts 143
XI.2. Fregean Argument and Counter-Argument 145
XI.3. The Descriptive Content of Indexicals and the Notional Specification of the Referent 147
XI.4. The Pragmatics of Indexicals in Modal Contexts . 151
XI.5. Application to Proper Names 154
XI.6. Concluding Remarks 156

XII. Referring and Rigid Designation 159
XII.1. Referring Rigidly 160
XII.2. Why We Refer Rigidly 162
XII.3. Representing a Rigid Reference 166
XII.4. Rigidity and Standard Referring 167
XII.5. Rigidity and Proper Names 170
XII.6. Non-rigid Reference 171
XII.7. Concluding Remarks 172

XIII. Some Conclusions and Consequences 175
XIII.1. Thinking and Talking About Individuals 175
XIII.2. On Proper Names and Identity 181
XIII.3. On Relational Necessity 183
XIII.4. Other Singular Terms 186

Bibliography 189
Index 192