

Contents

Preface	ix
Chapter 1. The Ergative Hypothesis	1
Chapter 2. The Justification of the Ergative Hypothesis: Its Syntactic Predictions	5
2.1. Ne -Cliticization and Auxiliary Selection in Italian	5
2.2. Auxiliary Selection in German	8
2.3. Participles as Attributes	18
2.4. Impersonal Passive – Agentive von (by) -PP	21
2.5. Derivational Morphology: -er and -ling Nominalizations	21
2.6. Topicalization of Subject + Participle II	23
2.7. Discontinuous Phrases	26
2.8. Extraction from NP Subjects	34
2.9. Extraction from Subject Sentences	48
2.10. Extraction and Extraposition	65
2.11. Extraction of Subjects	87
2.12. Dative	91
2.13. Control	94
2.14. Focus	96
2.15. Reflexives in A.c.I.-Constructions	97
Chapter 3. The Inverted Subject Position and the Case Assignment Problem	109
3.1. The First Two Versions of the ‘ pro -drop’ Parameter	109
3.2. pro and the Third and Fourth Versions of the pro -drop Parameter	123
3.3. Case Assignment to “Inverted” Subjects in German	134
3.4. pro Subjects in German	145
3.5. The Definiteness Effect	164
Chapter 4. Ergative Verbs and “Theme Verbs”	177
4.1. The Ergativity Tests	177
4.2. “Subject Inversion” and Non-Ergative Verbs	188
4.3. “Subject Inversion” and Focus	203
References	221