

Contents

I. Introduction: From Mankind to Marlowe	1
II. Criteria for a Popular Repertory	8
III. Auspices for the Élite Drama	26
IV. The Popular Canon	48
V. "Four Men and a Boy"	68
VI. The Tradition of Versatility	86
VII. Doubling Patterns in the 1580's and 1590's	104
VIII. The Origins of Popular Dramatic Structure	114
IX. The Pioneering Contributions of Bale and Skelton	128
X. The Intermediate Morality: Repetition, Expansion, and Elaboration	141
XI. Dual Protagonists and a Formula for Homiletic Tragedy	152
XII. The Transition to Chronicle	170
XIII. The Transition to Romance	190
XIV. Tamburlaine the Great	199
XV. The Jew of Malta	218
XVI. Edward II	234
XVII. The Conflict of Conscience and Doctor Faustus	245
Appendix: Plays "Offered for Acting"	265
The Texts of the Plays	274
A List of Works Frequently Cited	279
Notes	283
Index	301