

Contents

1. Introduction .....	11
1.1 Reading Laboring Bodies .....	18
1.2 The Dialectics of Laboring Bodies .....	24
1.3 Reading and Writing Capitalist Realism .....	45
2. Disabling Mobility .....	59
2.1 Disability Narratives and the Antinormative Novel of Embodiment .....	61
2.2 Ableism and Normative Encounters in Joshua Ferris’ The Unnamed .....	67
2.3 Of Empires and Pathologies of Speed: The Experience of Acceleration in The Unnamed .....	90
2.3.1 “He had wandered off the path of greatest efficiency” – Of Empires of Speed and the Experience of Acceleration in The Unnamed .....	92
2.3.2 “The brakes are gone, the steering wheel has locked” – Pathologies of Speed in The Unnamed .....	109
2.3.3 Intracorporeal Dissonance in The Unnamed .....	115
3. The Digitalized Workplace and the Quantified Laborer .....	131
3.1 The Digital (R)Evolution and Immaterial Labor .....	132
3.2 Digital Labor and the Rematerialization of Laboring Bodies in Dave Eggers’ The Circle .....	142
3.2.1 Quantified Selves and Their Incorporation .....	146
3.2.2 Incorporation in The Circle .....	158

4. The Making of Indebted Women: Motherhood, Precarity, and the Logic of Financialization .....	183
4.1 Narrating Financialization.....	184
4.2 The Financialization of a Mother’s Daily Life in Lydia Kiesling’s The Golden State .....	191
5. Revolt Qua Passivity? Resting Bodies in Ottessa Moshfegh’s My Year of Rest and Relaxation .....	209
5.1 An Absent Presence: Passivity as Subversion in Melville’s “Bartleby, The Scrivener” .....	211
5.2 Passive Resistance and Silent Suffering in My Year of Rest and Relaxation .....	223
5.2.1 “Good strong American sleep” – Sleep and the Politics of Overconformity in My Year of Rest and         Relaxation .....	225
5.2.2 Sleep as Rebellion and Unconscious Resistance in My Year of Rest and Relaxation .....	234
5.2.3 Affect, Neoliberalism, and the Critical Potential of Uncomfortable Readings .....	248
6. Coda: An Absent Presence – A Present Absence.....	271
Works Cited.....	285