

Contents

Preface	ix
I Introduction Carlo Cottarelli	I
II Macroeconomic and Structural Adjustment During 1995–97: An Overview Carlo Cottarelli	3
Roots of the 1993–94 Crisis	3
Economic Goals and Policy Strategy During 1995–97	7
The Macroeconomic Component	7
The Structural Component	12
Results of the Adjustment Program	13
External Accounts	13
Output Growth, Aggregate Demand Composition, and Unemployment	14
Inflation	15
References	18
III The External Current Account and Net Foreign Assets: Longer-Run Equilibrium Perspectives Thomas Krueger and Carlo Cottarelli	19
Determinants of the External Current Account and Net Foreign Assets: Theoretical Aspects	20
Intertemporal Models of the Current Account as Saving-Investment Balance	20
Foreign Asset Equilibria	22
Model-Based Results and Cross-Country Comparisons	22
Intertemporal Saving-Investment Model	22
Stock of Net Foreign Asset	23
References	24
IV Public Debt Dynamics and Fiscal Solvency Reza Moghadam	26
Determinants of Debt Dynamics	27
Debt Sustainability	29
Conclusion	30
References	30
V Reform of Public Finances, 1994–97 Edgardo Ruggiero	31
Size and Composition of Government and Main Structural Problems	31
Informational and Institutional Structure	31

The Pension System	33
The Health Care System	34
Subsidies and Central Budget Social Transfers	35
Smaller Deficit, Smaller Government	35
Decline in Primary Expenditures	37
Decline in Primary Revenue	40
Structural Reforms	42
Institutional Structure	42
Pension Reform	43
Health Reform	45
Tax and Customs Administration Reform	45
References	47
VI Hungary's Growth Performance: Has It Lived Up to Its Potential?
Rachel van Elkan	48
Growth During 1990-96	48
Growth in the Medium Term	51
Physical Capital	51
Labor	54
Factor Productivity	54
Removing Obstacles to Growth	55
References	55
VII What Determines Inflation in Hungary? A Cross-Country Perspective
Reza Moghadam	56
Hungary's Inflation Experience	56
What Determines Inflation?	57
A Structural Perspective on Inflation	57
Empirical Findings	58
Past Inflation	59
Fiscal Position	59
Exchange Rate Regime	60
Relative Prices	60
Other Factors	60
Conclusion	61
References	61
VIII Privatization
Rachel van Elkan	63
Early Progress	63
A New Direction for Privatization Since 1995	64
The 1995 Privatization Law	64
Large-Enterprise Privatization	65
Small-Enterprise Privatization	65
Use of Privatization Receipts	65
Obligations to Local Governments, Privatized Firms, and Holders of Compensation Coupons	66
Winding Down the Process Beyond Mid-1997	67
IX Trade Liberalization in Hungary
Perry Perone	68
Overview of the Trade Regime, 1960-97	68

Sectoral Effects of Trade Liberalization	70
Effective Rate of Protection—Concept and Formula for Calculations	70
Data and Methods	71
Results	71
Conclusions	73
References	73
X Labor Market Developments and Flexibility	74
Reza Moghadam
The Lost Million	74
Composition of Unemployment	76
Regulations and Constraints Affecting the Labor Market	77
Unemployment Benefits	78
Wage Determination and Flexibility	78
Nonwage Labor Costs	78
Other Institutional Elements	79
Conclusions	80
References	80
XI Financial Markets in Hungary	81
Rachel van Elkan
The Banking System	81
Structural Changes in Bank Lending and Deposits	81
Market Structure, Competition, and Specialization	84
Ownership Structure and Privatization	86
Bank Soundness and Profitability	87
Bank Supervision	88
Exchange Activity and Growth of Institutional Investors	89
Concluding Remarks	91
References	91
XII Foreign Borrowing and Capital Market Liberalization	92
Rachel van Elkan
Participation in International Capital Markets Since 1993	92
Capital Market Activities of the National Bank of Hungary	92
Capital Market Activities of the Nonsovereign Sector	94
Capital Account Liberalization	94
XIII A Look Ahead	96
Carlo Cottarelli
References	97