

Contents

Acknowledgments		ix
Chapter 1	Introduction. Blurred Boundaries: Modernity, Crisis, and Emancipation in the Culture of the Weimar Republic	1
Chapter 2	From Caligari to Dietrich: Anxieties About Sex and Gender in Weimar Cinema and Culture	15
Chapter 3	"New Objectivity": Ambivalent Accommodations with Modernity	39
Chapter 4	Boys in Crisis: Discourses of Castration in the Early Stabilized Period	59
	A. The Carnival of Humiliation, I: Literal Castration—as Metaphor— in Ernst Toller's Drama Hinkemann (1924)	59
	B. The Carnival of Humiliation, II: Sex & Social Mobility, Mass Spectacle & Reflexivity in E.A. Dupont's Film Variety (1925)	72
	C. Impotence and Therapy, Excess and Containment: "Curing" Male Crisis in G.W. Pabst's Film Secrets of a Soul ( Geheimnisse einer Seele ) (1926)	87
Chapter 5	The End of Stability: "Phallic" New Women and Male Intellectuals	99
	A. Amoral Modernity as New Woman:	99

	Erich Kästner's Novel Fabian (1931)
	B. The Cabaret of Humiliation: Gender, Spectacle, and Spectatorship in Josef von Sternberg's Film The Blue Angel (1930)	113
Chapter 6	Girls in Crisis: Women's Perspectives in Late Weimar	129
	A. Mass Culture, Downward Mobility, and Female Resistance: Irmgard Keun's Novel The Artificial Silk Girl (1932)	129
	B. Coming Out of the Uniform: Political and Sexual Emancipation in Leontine Sagan's Film Mädchen in Uniform (1931)	146
Chapter 7	Weimar Culture Now: "Americanism" and Post/Modernity	163
Notes		175
Works Cited		215
Index		233