

CONTENTS

---

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
Chapter I: Reading as a Barometer of German Society after the First World War	18
Chapter II: Reading Culture, Reading Budgets, and Consumer Society	56
Chapter III: From the Commercialization of Reading to Commercializing Reading	97
Chapter IV: From Reading Books to Consumption of Books and Back Again	147
Chapter V: The Struggle over Reading: Studies of Reading and the Fight against Schund- und Schmutzschriften	221
Conclusion	274
Bibliography	284
Index	305

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

---

Picture 1:	The book vs. books ( Simplicissimus , 30 (1926), 672)	34
Picture 2:	Book and sport: The increasing spread of sports need not diminish the consumption of books ( Simplicissimus , 30 (1926), 681)	37
Picture 3:	Hippopotamus in the library: Down with intellect! The coming generations will live in strength and beauty ( Simplicissimus , 31 (1926), 452)	41
Picture 4:	Dissemination network of newspapers ( Die Reklame (1932), 193)	100
Picture 5:	The fastest newspaper. Advertisement for the Ullstein daily B.Z. am Mittag ( Archiv für Buchgewerbe und Gebrauchsgraphik , 65 (1928), VIII)	114
Picture 6:	Advertiser vs. newspaper ( Die Reklame , 20 (1927), 317)	136
Picture 7:	The difference between commercial lending libraries and public libraries (from: Franz Schriewer, "Zur Frage der privat Leihbibliotheken" Bücherei und Bildungspflege 12 (1932)	174
Picture 8:	Examples of advertisements by the center for book advertisement ( Die Reklame , 21 (1928), 502)	186
Picture 9:	Borrowing books means eating out of the same pan with lots of others! ( Die Reklame , 21 (1928), 503)	188
Picture 10:	Books as presents	188
Picture 11:	A wish list (Friedrich Reinecke, Das gute Buchfenster (Leipzig: Verlag des Börsenvereins, 1926), 83)	189
Picture 12:	A wish note to Christmas ( Die Reklame , 21 (1928), 508)	189
Picture 13:	The Great Bott ( Die Reklame , 21 (1928), 509)	191
Picture 14:	Mayer's advertisement ( Nimm und Lies! , 2 (1929), 25)	193
Picture 15:	The German book day ( Die Reklame , 22 (1929), 250)	195
Picture 16:	Waldof Astoria woodcut advertisement ( Archiv für Buchgewerbe und Gebrauchsgraphik , 64 (1928)	209

- Picture 17: The pulp reader (From: Hans Wingender, Erfahrungen im Kampf gegen Schund- und Schmutzschriften (Düsseldorf: Published by the author, 1929), 90. 250
- Picture 18: The trash fighter 250
- Picture 19: In the cellar: Patients, children, there'll soon be a law against pulp writings—and you'll feel better! (Simplicissimus, 31 (1926), 449) 253
- Picture 20: The Law for the Protection of Young People against Trash and Filth: Build apartments instead of paragraphs (Simplicissimus, 31 (1926), 232) 254
- Picture 21: I fight against pulp writings—and my maid pinched my Casanova! (Simplicissimus, 31 (1926), 451) 262

LIST OF TABLES

---

Table 2.1:	Real consumer expenditure: 1907 and 1927–1928	64
Table 2.2:	Spending on books, newspapers and magazines by family, 1927–1928	83
Table 2.3:	Expenditure on reading material compared with outlay on cinema, radio, and sports	90
Table 4.1:	Book publication figures for Germany, France, Italy, England, and the USA	148
Table 4.2:	First editions vs. reprints	148
Table 4.3:	Number of bookshops and publishers, 1875–1939	153
Table 4.4:	Establishment of bookshops and publishers, 1901–1938	154
Table 4.5:	Book trade turnover	154
Table 5.1:	Most popular books borrowed—history	231

LIST OF FIGURES

---

Figure 1: Type of books borrowed by male/female readers	226
Figure 2: Borrowing patterns of various types of fiction classified by gender	226
Figure 3: Distribution of loans: Workers vs. Bourgeois	230
Figure 4: Borrowing distribution	235