

CONTENTS

Preface vii

- Part 1      | Identifying German Jews John Borneman 1
- Part 2      Life Histories: From the Soviet Union to East and West Berlin 35
- Chapter 1   Ruth Benario: 'I find nothing homey here. I am here to help, that is all.' 37
- Chapter 2   Albert Klein: 'Berlin is home for me.' 61
- Part 3      Life Histories: From the United States to East and West Berlin 79
- Chapter 3   Hilde Eisler: 'I was deported by the Americans.
I am a GDR Jew.' 81
- Chapter 4   Ernst Cramer: 'I never stopped being a German Jew.' 103
- Part 4      | Life Histories: From England to East Berlin 119
- Chapter 5   Jürgen Kuczynski: 'My friends, it is already after ten.' 121
- Chapter 6   Susanne Rödel: 'I feel stranger than ever in my former country.' 135
- Chapter 7   Wolfgang Herzberg: 'I was raised to be a radical Stalinist, not in the aggressive sense, but to be a naive believer.' 157
- Part 5      Life Histories: Carrying on Tradition 177
- Chapter 8   Marion Ruth Thimm: 'I am not so good in history. I always left that to my father.' 179
- Chapter 9   Kate P. Leiterer: 'I would say, a committed communist of Jewish origin.' 197

Part 6	Life Histories: Rediscovery of Jewishness East and West 219
Chapter 10	Jessica Jacoby: 'I'm a minority as a feminist and as a lesbian, and that means always sitting in between.' 221
Chapter 11	Konstantin Münz: 'I cannot say who I am, where I belong. I don't fit.' 243
Part 7	From Surviving to Belonging: Stories of the Returned Jeffrey M. Peck 261
	Notes 293
	Selected Bibliography 301
	Index 307