

Preface

Introduction

Stanisława Golinowska, Elmar Hönekopp, Milan Horálek

1

Elmar Hönekopp

Background: Economic and Labour Market Development in Selected Reform Countries in Central and Eastern Europe

7

1. Reform process in the transformation countries: general conditions, different starting positions, differing strategies

7

2. General economic and welfare development

9

- 2.1 General economic development

9

- 2.2 Welfare development

11

- 2.3 Development of wages and real wages

13

3. Labour market trends

19

- 3.1 Labour supply

19

- 3.1.1 Population, employable population

19

- 3.1.2 Dependent labour force, labour force participation

21

- 3.2 Development of gainful employment

24

- 3.2.1 Overall development

24

- 3.2.2 Sectoral development

27

- 3.2.3 Development of self-employment

34

- 3.3 Development of overall labour productivity and unit labour costs

37

- 3.4 Development of unemployment

40

- 3.4.1 Overall development

40

- 3.4.2 Regional differentiation

44

- 3.4.3 Special aspects: youth unemployment, long-term unemployment

45

53

Elmar Hönekopp

Labour Migration to Germany from Central and Eastern Europe - Old and New Trends

1. Migration to Germany after World War II

53

2. Current migration patterns

54

- 2.1 General migration trends since the eighties

54

- 2.2 Migration of foreigners

55

- 2.3 Migration of Germans

56

- 2.4 Migration today

57

3.	Immigration and population development	58
4.	Migration from the East and the labour market in Germany	60
4.1	General development	60
4.2	Special employment opportunities for East Europeans in Germany	61
4.2.1	Project-tied work	62
4.2.2	Seasonal work	63
4.2.3	Border commuters	63
4.2.4	Guest workers	64
4.2.5	Foreign nurses	64
4.3	Objectives of the programmes	64
4.4	Actual employment of East European workers in Germany	66
4.5	Employment of East European workers: importance for the labour market in Germany	69
5.	Importance of East European employment in Germany for the economy of the home countries	75
6.	Summary and outlook	77
6.1	Immigration from Central and Eastern Europe reconsidered	77
6.2	Future migration	78
6.3	Germany needs an immigration policy	79

Stanisława Golinowska* 83

Economic Development and the Labour Market in Poland 1989-1996

1.	Introduction	83
2.	Structural transformations in the economy	84
3.	Changes in the labour market	88
3.1	Changes in the structure of economic activity of the population	88
3.2	Features of unemployment in Poland	94
4.	Policy on counteracting unemployment and providing assistance to the unemployed	99

Stanisława Golinowska, Edward Marek, Antoni Rajkiewicz* 123

Migration Processes in Poland 1990-1996 - Research Summary

1.	Foreign migrations	123
1.1	Introduction	123
1.2	Departures from Poland for permanent residence in the years 1990-1996	126
1.3	Temporary economic migration	133
1.3.1	Contracts for service	133
1.3.2	Seasonal workers	134

1.3.3 Guestworkers	136
1.3.4 Work in border regions	136
1.3.5 Student work during holidays	138
1.3.6 Other trips provided by bilateral agreements about employment	138
1.3.7 Illegally employed emigrants	138
1.4 Immigration to Poland for permanent residence	140
1.5 Foreign nationals in Poland - temporary residence	144
1.5.1 Work permits for foreign nationals	146
1.5.2 Total number of foreign nationals employed in Poland	152
1.5.3 Foreign students in Poland	153
2. Internal migration	153
2.1 Introduction	153
2.2 Changes in internal migration in the 1990s	155
3. Regional diversification of migration processes	157
4. Summary and conclusions	164
Stanisława Golinowska	173
Regional Diversification against Migration Processes - Research Summary
1. Introduction	173
2. Research on regional diversification - research hypotheses	174
3. The analysis method	176
4. Results of the analysis	180
5. The comparison of regional diversification using various synthetic development indicators	186
6. Regional divergence compared with migration processes	190
7. The economic activity and mobility of the population of selected voivodships	193
7.1 The hypothesis and the research method	193
7.2 Results of the analysis of the economic activity and mobility of the population in selected voivodships	194
8. The economic activity and mobility of the population of selected gminas	202
8.1 The research method	202
8.2 Results of research on active gminas	203
8.3 Results of research on regressed gminas	206
9. Conclusions and recommendations	207

Economic and Social Transformation in the Czech Republic between 1990 and 1997

Milan Horálek

217

1.	Economic and social transformation in the Czech Republic between 1990 and 1997	217
2.	Trends in the Czech economy	218
3.	Employment and the labour market	227
3.1	General aspects of the employment trend	227
3.2	Trends in productivity in the Czech economy	231
3.3	Worker migration	233
3.3.1	Trends in the employment of foreign nationals	234
3.3.2	Structure of working foreign nationals by nationality	237
3.3.3	Structure of working foreign nationals by branch	240
3.4	Unemployment	242
3.5	Active employment policy	251
4.	Economic decline in 1997	257
4.1	Rising social tension	258
4.2	The dramatic Prague spring of 1997	259
4.3	Summer 1997: A tragic natural disaster	261
4.4	Expectations regarding future economic and social trends	261
5.	Activities on regional labour markets	263
5.1	Preliminary outline	263
5.2	Conclusions drawn from empirical analyses of selected districts	265
5.2.1	Labour market characteristics in the selected districts	267
5.2.2	Negative trends on regional labour markets in 1997	275
5.2.3	Employment at international (supranational) and foreign companies	276

Summary and Conclusions

Stanisława Golinowska, Elmar Hönekopp, Milan Horálek

279

1.	Economic and labour market development in Central and Eastern Europe	279
2.	Labour migration between Central/Eastern Europe and Germany	282
2.1	Immigration from Central and Eastern Europe reconsidered	282
2.2	Future migration	283
3.	Economic development and labour market in Poland 1989 - 1996	284
4.	Migration processes in Poland 1990 - 1995	286
5.	Regional diversification in Poland against migration processes	290

6.	Economic and social transformation in the Czech Republic between 1990 and 1997	294
6.1	Economic growth and employment	294
6.2	Activating regional policy	295
6.3	Regional labour market policy	296
6.4	Making active employment policy more effective	296
7.	Outlook	297
 Annex: IAB-IPiSS-VÚPSV Working Papers		299
The authors		313
Summaries/Kurzfassungen der Beiträge dieses Bandes		315