

Contents

Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	1
Issues for discourse analysis	4
Part I Theory and method	11
1 Ideology and political economy	13
The falsity of 'race'	14
The history of the 'racial' account	18
The political and economic context	22
The social functions of ideology	24
The effectivity of ideology	26
Discursive representation, reality and individual experience	29
Ideology in perspective	31
2 Cognition, identity and personality	34
Reading cognitions	36
Social categorization and social stereotypes	36
Representation and reality in social cognition research	40
Reading social identity	43
The ontology and epistemology of social identity theory	46
Reading motives	49
Discourse analysis as diagnosis	55
3 Discourse, power and subjectivity	58
Discursive practice	60
Discourse and its objects	62
The status of scientific accounts of racism	65
Truth and anti-racist practice	67

	From ideology to ideological practice	69
	Constructing social groups	72
	Constructing subjectivities	75
	Discursive power	79
	Genealogy and ideology	85
4	Analyzing racist discourse	88
	Discourses and interpretative repertoires	89
	Rhetorical construction	93
	Interviews and documents	98
	Transcription, coding and analysis	100
	Understanding, ethnography and discursive consequences	102
	Putting discourse in context	104
Part II	Discourse in action	113
	Preface	115
5	Constructing community: 'race', 'culture' and 'nation'	117
	The premises of race	119
	Victorian racial interpretation	124
	Race in 1960s New Zealand	125
	The premises of culture	128
	Culture as heritage	129
	Culture as therapy	131
	Pākehā positions	134
	Culture as ideology	137
	The premises of nation and nationalism	139
	Mimicry and ambivalence	142
	Towards a South Pacific nation?	143
	The practice of categorization	146
6	Accounting for the 'social': stories of social conflict and social influence	149
	Discrediting protest	150
	Variable scenarios of influence	154
	Conflict or consensus: the organic society	158
	'Proper' and 'improper' influence	161
	Susceptible masses and hysterical extremists	163
	Formulations of the individual versus the social	164
	Trickling down or trickling up, conspiracies or coincidences?	167
7	Practical politics and ideological dilemmas	174
	Some commonplaces of political discourse	177
	The patchwork of resources	178
	The importance of being practical	179
	Equality, freedom and individual rights	181

Imperial history	183
Mobilizing arguments	185
Ambivalent individuals or ambivalent discourse?	194
Towards a critique of the modern racism approach	196
8 The prejudice problematic	201
Prejudice in social psychological and lay discourse	202
Individual bigotry and collective guilt	204
Irrationality and pre-judgement	206
The manifest and the latent	208
Tolerance and harmony	209
Dodging the identity of prejudice: how to deal with accusations	211
Reforming the prejudiced	215
Discourse analysis and anti-racism	216
Appendix 1 Sample and procedure	221
Appendix 2 Transcription conventions	225
References	227
Index	241