

Contents

I. THE LIBERAL PARADOX
1. Regulating Immigration in the Liberal Polity	3
2. The Political Economy of International Migration	19
II. IMMIGRATION IN POSTWAR EUROPE
3. Guestworkers and the Politics of Growth	45
4. Foreigners and the Politics of Recession	74
III. POLICIES AND MARKETS
5. Immigration Policy and Labor	99
6. Immigration and the French State	124
7. Immigration and Industrial Policy in France	141
IV. MARKETS AND RIGHTS IN EUROPE AND THE UNITED STATES
8. Citizenship and Rights	169
9. Immigration and the Principles of Liberal Democracy	214
Selected Bibliography	235
Notes	251
Index	297

Figures

4.1 Foreign populations in France, Germany, and Switzerland	89
4.2 Immigration in France, Germany, and Switzerland	89
4.3 Foreign workers in France, Germany, and Switzerland	90
5.1 Long-run demand curve for labor	108
5.2 Four labor market situations	112
5.3 The political-economic model of the policymaking process	119
6.1 The political-economic model of policy implementation	128

Tables

5.1 Average annual percentage increase in real GDP in five labor-importing countries, 1960–1981	103
5.2 Average annual percentage increase in real consumer prices in five labor-importing countries, 1960–1981	103
5.3 Average annual unemployment rates in five labor-importing countries, 1960–1981	103
6.1 Estimates of the political-economic models of immigration and foreign employment in France, 1950–1987	137
7.1 Foreign workers in selected economic sectors in France, 1950–1980	144
7.2 Foreign workers in French industry, 1967–1979	146
7.3 Employment, productivity, and investment in French industry, in periods of growth (1967–1973) and crisis (1974–1979)	148
7.4 Foreign employment in selected industrial sectors in France, 1967–1979	151
7.5 Foreign and national employment in France, 1967–1979	152
7.6 Estimates of the political-economic model of worker immigration by four sectors, 1946–1980	162
7.7 Estimates of the political-economic model of foreign employment by economic sector	163